AF Ordered Reorganized In Support Of Infantry

Tactical Aviation To Be Stressed in Vandenberg Order Expected Out Today

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF Chief of Staff, has ordered a reorganization of the Air Force to provide increased training and emphasis on support of Army ground troops.

USAF officials told The Washington Post that the revamping and strengthening of tactical aviation will provide more joint airborne-troop carrier training and meet the Army's minimum requirements for close air support of its infantry, armored and airborne divisions.

The latter were recently set forth in a memorandum submitted to the Air Force Tactical Air Command by Gen. Mark Clark, chief of Army Field Forces.

It is understood to provide for Air Force tactical planes participating in at least one joint field problem annually with every battalion, regiment and division in continental United States.

Modify Training Schedules

Army training schedules are being modified concurrently to make the new program possible. Their field exercises generally will be spread out over the entire calender year, instead of being peaked during the summer, USAF officers said.

At the same time, troop units in the Northwest states will concentrate their training to permit Air Force tactical units to work with them during one period instead of wasting time making several trips from their Eastern bases.

Heretofore, joint Air Force-Army training in close air support largely has been confined to the big annual maneuvers. The vital small unit ground-air training has been lacking.

This has been a source of great dissatisfaction to Army officers and the occasion of some criticism of the Air Force for "neglecting" tactical air by "overemphasis" on strategical air power.

Top Army chiefs, however, have refused to support such attacks for the most part. They have preferred to "work within the family" for betterment of the situation. Vandenberg's order—approved on Friday—appears to vindicate the wisdom of that course.

Recognize Rigid Limits

While not entirely satisfied with the expanded tactical training program, Army chiefs recognize that there are rigid limits to what can be done within the USAF 48-group program.

Officials explained that the re-

Russia Charges U. S. Fliers Help In Sneak Mapping

London, May 15 (U.P.).—Russia charged officially tonight that aerial photographs of Soviet territory are being taken on the frontier of the Soviet Union and Iran and that Americans are participating.

Photographs are being taken for military and geological purposes, Russia charged. Presumably any geological photographs would be taken in connection with oil facilities—or possibly uranium mining operations.

The Russian embassy in Tehran delivered a note to the Iranian government yesterday detailing the allegation, Moscow radio said.

The note pointed to recent press reports that the Iranian Oil Company was doing preliminary work for the extraction of oil in the areas of Gurgan, Mazanderan and Gilan near the Caspian Sea and that the work included aerial photography.

Iran notified the Soviet government that such work was being undertaken and the Soviet government replied April 8 that it had not been given a full report and objected to the presence of foreigners in the area.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Helicopter hovers over woman and would-be rescuers clinging to wrecked sister ship (arrow)

Niagara Falls, N. Y., May 15 (AP). Two pilots and a woman they were rescuing by helicopter narrowly escaped death near the brink of Niagara Falls today when the craft capsized in the Niagara River.

All three were saved with the aid of a second helicopter after a rock had caught the drifting ship and kept it from being swept over the 160-foot Horseshoe Falls, on the Canadian side.

The dramatic rescue was made in the swift waters just off Three Sisters Islands, about 300 feet from the edge of the cataract.

The woman was Jeannette Bugay, 25-year-old wife of a Niagara Falls taxi driver and mother of three.

Her husband, Sigmund, said she had been suffering from a nervous breakdown and had disappeared from home yesterday.

Bugay, who talked to his wife in a hospital after the rescue, said she

Struck Rails Resume Some Operations

Southern to Restore 'Tennesseean' Today; No Settlement in Sight

Chicago, May 15 (AP). — Two strike-harassed railroad systems stepped up emergency operations today and a third began recalling some furloughed track and shop employes.

Federal mediators held separate meetings throughout the day with the carriers and striking locomotive firemen, but there was no sign of an early break in the six-day-old strike.

The Santa Fe lifted its embargo on all west-bound freight, except for livestock. A spokesman said the move reflected "our appraisal of conditions on our line—that we can handle this west-bound business." He added it had no connection with the strike outlook.

The spokesman said Santa Fe has been operating a "few" freight trains daily over its struck line. He did not say whether union employes were manning the trains.

PRR Runs 56 Freights

The Pennsylvania Railroad announced it operated 56 freight trains today and has handled nearly 10,000 carloads of freight, including perishables, since last Friday. The PRR also said it has stepped up yard switching operations.

A spokesman added that both freight and yard switching oerations would be expanded further Tuesday. The PRR said it handled 10 freight trains Friday, 22 Saturday, and 42 yesterday.

The Southern Railway System announced it is recalling some furloughed shop and track employes and added it has postponed layoffs for clerical help in its Washington and Atlanta, Ga., offices until Wednesday.

[The Southern said its diesel train "The Tennesseean" will be restored to service today, leaving Washington at 8:35 (EST) this morning, and Chattanooga, Tenn., at 4:45 a. m., Wednesday.]

Strike Broadens

At the same time, however, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen broadened its strike against the Southern system and claimed all its important operations were virtually halted.

Despite the stepped-up operations, freight movements are far below normal on the five struck lines. These lines normally handle more than a third of the Na-

NLRB Wins Dispute With Fifth Circuit

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

The Supreme Court yesterday agreed with the Government that the National Labor Relations Board hasn't been getting a fair break from the United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals, which covers six Southern States.

Justice Clark delivered majority opinions in a 7-to-2 split of the court in two labor cases. Justices Frankfurter and Jackson dissented.

Clark's moderately worded opinion stuck to the detailed facts involving two Southern textile firms and two rival unions in reversing the Circuit Court. At one point he did say that the labor law "does not require the board to play hide-and-seek with those guilty of unfair labor practices."

But Frankfurter was more direct. He said the Court of Appeals was being reversed "by attributing to it a disavowed disregard of an important principle" in the labor board's administration, the right of the labor board to obtain quick enforcement orders from the appeals bench. He said the high court majority was, in effect, attributing to the appeals court "a willful disregard of principle" and "an abuse of discretion" that constituted a needless "rebuke" of that court.

Frankfurter said the Supreme Court thus was taking "action calculated to chill other judges in exercising with utter freedom a discretion which we have hereto-

Where Is Elmer? He's Speeding to His Own Li'l Fire

Capt. Elmer F. Stein was the most surprised fireman in Washington yesterday.

Assigned as acting battalion chief, he was asleep at Engine House 24. About 1:30 a. m. his driver, Pvt. James E. White, awoke Stein. "Let's roll," he said. "We're going to a little fire. I think it's in an icebox."

Presently, they pulled up, along with an engine company and a truck, before 326 Oglethorpe st. nw. Surprise! That's where Captain Stein lives.

He spent yesterday afternoon installing a new motor in his refrigerator.

Three Dairies Acquitted of Price Fixing

Anti-Trust Suit Against 4 Others Ordered Continued

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

District Court Judge Alexander Holtzoff yesterday acquitted three dairies of conspiring to fix milk prices.

But he ordered the two-year-old anti-trust suit against four other dairies, the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers' Association and its secretary-treasurer to continue.

Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase, Thompson's and Wakefield Dairies, which supply Washington with 62.9 percent of its milk, were acquitted.

Judge Holtzoff denied a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal in favor of Alexandria, Lucerne, Richfield and Harvey Dairies, the Association and B. B. Derrick.

Had No Contracts

In a 45-minute oral opinion behind locked courtroom doors, Judge Holtzoff ruled that "it is a prima facie price-fixing scheme, banned by statute," when a farmers' cooperative has "full supply" contracts with dairies, and when those contracts embody the "classification plan" of determining milk prices.

The three acquitted dairies had no contracts with the Association, Judge Holtzoff ruled.

A full supply contract provides that a dairy shall buy all its milk from the Association.

Trygve Lie Meets Stalin In Kremlin

Molotov, Vishinsky Present as Premier Talks 90 Minutes Withh U. N. Leader

Moscow, May 15 (AP).—Secretary-General Trygve Lie climaxed his peace mission to Moscow tonight in a 90-minute talk with Prime Minister Josef Stalin at the Kremlin.

The United Nations chief executive officer, touring Europe capitals in hopes of ending the cold war, met the Soviet leader in his office at 10 p. m., Moscow Time.

Among those present were Vice Premier V. M. Molotov and Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky.

The meeting came four days after Lie's arrival in Moscow and after he had met one time each with Vishinsky and Deputy Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, former chief Soviet delegate to the United Nations.

Earlier today Lie was Vishinsky's guest at a formal luncheon.

Few details of the Lie-Stalin meeting were announced tonight. It was suggested Lie would discuss it more fully at a news conference tentatively scheduled for Wednesday.

There was immediate speculation as to just what Lie and Stalin talked about. As it was Lie's idea to see the Soviet leader, the presumption is that he opened the conversation with either some suggestions or even a plan.

One may assume that Lie had a willing listener. (This reference was not amplified in the dispatch, which had to pass Russian censorship).

Although he came halfway round the world to see Stalin, Lie did not have to go far on the final leg of his journey to the Kremlin. The National Hotel where Lie is staying is across a wide square from the Kremlin.

Russia Announces Cut In German Reparations

London (Tuesday), May 16 (AP).—The Soviet government has decided to cut German reparations payments, Moscow Radio said early today.

The announcement came after a weekend statement by the Big Three foreign ministers in London that the United States, Britain and France had agreed to relax controls on western Germany but that no peace treaty is possible while Soviet policy remains unchanged.

(A State Department official in Washington characterized the Soviet action as "a sort of empty gesture."

(The Soviet offer to cut reparations, the official said, "is just being done for political propaganda effect.")

The politburo of the East German Socialist Unity (Communist) Party asked the Russians May 10 to reduce reparations in "order to speed our reconstruction and raise the living standard of our people."

Observers in Berlin predicted the widely advertised Communist request would be granted as a means of wooing the Germans.

Today's broadcast said the Soviet Union had decided to cut reparations in half to make them $3,171,000,000.

Mother Regains 'Stolen' Boy In Air Pursuit to Montreal

By Robert Thompson
Post Reporter

A tow-headed, 4½-year-old boy was back home last night with his mother and grandparents in Washington after a merry chase to Montreal. The mother and grandfather said the father was trying to take the boy to England.

The boy is Henry, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Curtis. The mother, who is suing her husband for divorce, lives at 373 N. Nelson st., Arlington. The father is a former British Army captain whom Mrs. Curtis met and married here during the war.

Mrs. Curtis' parents are Mr. and Mrs. George F. Snell, 25 Poplar ave., Takoma Park. He is a public information specialist with the Department of Agriculture. Mrs. Curtis, under her maiden name of Dorothy Snell, is a well-known figure skater.

Under a temporary court order issued in Arlington, Curtis is entitled to custody of his son three hours each Sunday afternoon, pending trial of the divorce action. Sunday, Mrs. Curtis said, her estranged husband did not return with the boy when expected.

Sunday evening, she said, she received two telegrams from Curtis telling her he and Henry were on the way to England by way of Montreal. After consulting her attorney, John Paul Jones, Mrs. Curtis and her father flew to New

Truman Urges Defeat Of 'Obstructionists' In GOP-Dixie Combine

President Aroused At Capitol Coalition, But Predicts Gains For His Program

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Chicago, May 15. — President Truman tonight called for defeat of the "obstructionists" who have been blocking his program in a speech plainly aimed at the Republican-Dixiecrat coalition in Congress.

Before a picturesque Jefferson Jubilee throng at Chicago Stadium, Mr. Truman rolled up his sleeves and let fly at "backward" legislators in both parties.

"We know you cannot get along in the atomic age with the horse-and-buggy ideas," he told thousands packed into the stadium.

His speech followed a winding parade through the city, with flares, bands, floats, aerial rockets and balloons supplying the election-year atmosphere.

Police estimated the crowds that lined the 3-mile, hour-long parade route at 450,000, and nearly 22,000 piled into the stadium. Nearly a mile of listless, poorly clad down-and-outers watched from the curb of Madison street's Skid Row.

After he had been kept under wraps nearly all day in his hotel suite, the President's appearance touched off the first real party hoopla in a rather dull three-day round of party conferences.

Ends "Non-Political" Wraps

The President shook off eight days of "non-political" inhibitions to slap at the Republican Party by name. But chiefly he denounced the Communist left, with its "Godless theories," and the "prejudices of the extreme right" in both parties.

Declaring he will carry the fight for his Fair Deal program into the Eighty-Second Congress if necessary, he said there are "still many backward-looking Senators and Representatives, who have tried to defeat every progressive measure they could, and to obstruct and delay those they could not defeat."

"I hope that by next January some of the obstructionists will be defeated," he said.

Still Hopes for Congress

He told the cheering Democrats, however, that he still has hope in his Eighty-first Congress. Already it has "reversed the backward trend" of the Republican Eightieth and before it adjourns it will pass

Inonu and Party Apparently Swept Out in Landslide Vote

Change of Government Not Expected to Affect Fight on Communists

Turkey's resistance to communism will not be weakened in the slightest, officials here believe, if the five-year-old Democrat Party turns out to have won Sunday's election.

On domestic issues there are some differences between the Turkish parties, but on foreign affairs there has been 100 percent bipartisanship between the Democrats and President Inonu's People's Party, which has ruled Turkey for 27 years.

State Department press officer Lincoln White said yesterday it was "premature" to comment on the election results. He did say there appeared to have been a heavy poll and an orderly election, and that it was therefore "a mile-

125 Million Loan Planned For Argentina

NAC Approval Seen Soon to Clear Up Debts Owed U. S. Exporters

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

A 125-million-dollar Export-Import Bank loan to Argentina is on the verge of approval by the National Advisory Council, the Government body that has the final say on all American lending abroad.

The NAC is due to meet today, with the Argentine loan already approved by its expert staff. Its members include the Secretaries of Treasury, State and Commerce or their alternates.

For Clearing Up Debts

The loan is intended to clear up the debts that the Peron government still owes American exporters for goods sent to Argentina. It will be followed, according to authoritative reports yesterday, by a private loan of about 75 million dollars to Argentina from the National City Bank of New York and the First National Bank of Boston.

Large-scale American help to Peron has been brewing ever since last July, when there were signs that the Argentine president was anxious to end the economic estrangement between his country and the United States.

A public loan became probable when Peron's minister of the treasury, Ramon Cereijo, visited Washington early last month. American officials then concluded that help to Peron would be a gamble worth

Ed Flynn Is Placed In Oxygen Tent; Truman Is Visitor

Chicago, May 15 (AP).—Edward J. Flynn, Democratic national committeeman from New York, was placed in an oxygen tent today. St. Luke's Hospital physicians said he was suffering from a heart ailment.

The doctors described Flynn's condition as "good," but declined to say when he would be released.

Flynn, 58, collapsed at the Blackstone Hotel yesterday.

The Democratic leader of the Bronx was visited at midafternoon by President Truman.

Flynn told the President that he felt much better than he did yesterday.

Asia Viewed By McCarthy As Betrayed

SAR Convention Hears State Dept. Blasted On Chinese Policy

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

In a rip-roaring attack fulfilling advance notice that it would be his "roughest" speech to date, Senator McCarthy yesterday blasted what he termed the State Department's betrayal of Asia.

He demanded that President Truman fire Secretary of State Acheson, and with him Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup. Those two and Professor Owen Lattimore constitute a three-man axis to turn over all of Asia to the Kremlin, McCarthy said.

Plan a Hoax

The Wisconsin Republican referred to a "master plan" for a "vicious hoax and fraud that is being perpetrated on the American people," and which "deceives and betrays America and promotes communism."

"It is the strategy of the Lattimore-Acheson axis of hitting Communists at the front door with a silk handkerchief while they beat the brains out of your friends at the back door," he said.

McCarthy's speech was made to the Diamond Jubilee Convention of the Sons of the American Revolution, meeting in Atlantic City.

In the course of his remarks, McCarthy left his main theme to give a brief defense of his star witness, former Communist Louis Budenz, who was denounced bitterly on Friday by Senator Chavez (D., N. Mex.). McCarthy said he would answer the "vicious assault" in more detail in a speech to an editors' convention May 25.

Long Hand of Kremlin

Meantime, however, he referred to Chevez's speech as a "paranoic attack" and said that "obviously, in this rugged fight, the Kremlin is reaching into high places for dupes to spew its malignant smear."

He also paid tribute to the work Budenz did to uncover Communists, by helping the FBI and pointed out that that agency and the Department of Justice "placed great reliance" on Budenz as a witness in the prosecution of America's top 11 Communists.

In Washington yesterday, Chavez said he had performed a service for the Catholic Church by at-

Mice Tests Show Milk Factor Takes Paralysis Out of Polio

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Baltimore, May 15.—Discovery of a factor in human milk which apparently takes the paralysis out of infantile paralysis was disclosed here today by a Cincinnati scientist.

The disclosure closely followed other cheering news—laboratory success of a new drug against influenza—as more than 2000 scientists convened here at the fiftieth anniversary meeting of the Society of American Bacteriologists.

Dr. Albert B. Sabin, professor of pediatrics research and director of the Children's Hospital Research Foundation, Cincinnati, disclosed the "interesting new lead" in polio research, uncovered in studies of a severe polio epidemic among Canadian Eskimos.

The antipolio substance in mothers' milk, he said, has also been found, but to a far lesser degree, in cows' milk.

With it, he told reporters, mice exposed to crippling doses of a common strain of human polio virus have escaped the paralyzing after-effects of the dread disease.

Laboratory tests, Dr. Sabin said, uncovered the substance in all human breast milk obtained within five days after the start of milk flow following childbirth, and in about 75 percent of samples taken between one month and 145 days.

In cow's milk it is found far less

Official Opening Of Underpass Set for Noon

Rain or shine, elaborated noon ceremonies today will officially open the recently completed Dupont Circle underpass.

The highpoint, set for about 12:15 p. m., will be the release of 100 homing pigeons from three gold-colored crates to "symbolize the spreading of the welcome news that the underpass is once again open to traffic," the Connecticut Avenue Association announced last night.

Vice President Barkley originally was slated to spring the birds and be honor guest but sent word from Chicago late yesterday that he would be unavoidably detained.

All dedication events, which will run into the evening, will take place from a reviewing stand at the south side of the circle.

Schedule of events:

11:30 a. m.—Music by the Police Band and singing by its quartet under direction of Capt. Charles Benter.

Noon—Introduction of E. Goring Bliss, president of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association, as master of ceremonies. National Anthem by Metropolitan Police Band. Invocation pronounced by Msgr. John K. Cartwright of St. Matthews Cathedral. Presentation speech by Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young. Acceptance speech by Horace J. Meyers, president of Connecticut Avenue Association.

12:45 p. m.—Motorcade will proceed northward through the underpass, including a vehicle carrying a 1-ton replica of the Liberty Bell.

8:30 p. m.—Folk dancing festival on the reviewing stand. American, Indian, Irish, Israeli, Swedish, Greek and Mexican dance groups will participate.

Flood Crest Hits Stricken Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Man., May 15 (U.P.).—The flood crest of the raging Red River hit Winnipeg today and the city's fate hinged on its sodden, battered dikes.

Flood authorities reported the 20 miles of dikes still were holding but were weakening under the never-ending pressure of the river's 30-mile-an-hour current.

Nearly a third of the city's 320,000 residents already had left Winnipeg.

Today's flood crest of 30.1 feet was expected to last for a week and authorities warned the dikes might crumble under this prolonged "peak pressure." The swollen river has been pounding the dikes since the first floods hit this prairie capital five weeks ago. Ten main dikes already have collapsed.

Brig. R. E. A. Morton, army flood control commander, urged the 50,000 civilians and 5000 servicemen manning the dikes to stay on the job.

"The city will be in even more serious trouble if the citizen-army of dike workers relaxes its vigilance," he said. He said high waters would exert tremendous pressure on dikes for weeks.

Army flood control headquarters warned that the seven-mile dike protecting the twin city of St. Boniface across the river was in the greatest danger and might be completely undermined within the next 24 hours. A break would send a 10-foot wall of water into the St. Boniface area.

"If this dike went, virtually all of the 18 square miles of St. Boniface would go under water," Mayor George MacLean warned.

The Red River at 30.1 feet was 12.1 above flood level. It appeared to be leveling off from its highest mark in 89 years.

Phone Rate Increase Fight Off

Baltimore, May 15 (AP).—The Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co., today reluctantly acquiesced in the Public Service Commission's denial last March of further rate increases in Maryland.

The utility notified the PSC it would not appeal the case to the courts.

But C. & P. repeated its contention that the commission's opinion on the fair value of its property is less than actual fair value.

It reserved the right to contest in any future proceedings the findings of the PSC which followed extended hearings two months ago.

At that time, the PSC made permanent a temporary rate boost of $4 million annually but denied the telephone company's request for more than $2 million beyond that.

The company vice president, W. G. Morrell, said it would seek another increase if the commission's "optimistic estimates" on the utility's revenues failed to materialize.

Winnipeg Family Reaches District Safely After Flight From Terrors of Canadian City's Rushing Flood Water

The Washington Post

FLOOD VICTIMS—Looking at emergency edition of Winnipeg newspaper are, from left, Ronee Dudwick, 16; Mrs. Jack Ludwick of 1129 B st. se., the refugees' hostess here; Gerald Ludwick, 6; Jack Ludwick, and Mrs. Irene Ludwick, the children's mother

"They told us just to forget about our homes."

But that directive was a whole lot easier to give than take, according to three evacuees from Winnipeg's rushing floods after arriving here yesterday.

Sitting in the parlor of relatives at 1129 B st. se., the tired Ludwick family, only 18 hours out of the flood-ridden city, was still there, emotionally.

They unfolded the emergency edition of the newspaper put out Sunday urging elderly people, women and children to leave the city at once. The front page listed streets, bridges and subway stops inundated, and led with the hopeful note that the Red River had not risen for 13 hours.

Husband Stayed

The refugees were Mrs. Irene Ludwick, whose husband, Ernest, stayed behind to keep building up the dikes; her 16-year-old daughter Ronee and awfully tired 6-year-old son Gerald. It was all Gerald could do to stay awake after his long-distance plane trip—his first.

The Ludwicks used to live in a two-story stucco house located a short block from the Assiniboine River, tributary of the Red River. Winnipeg is located at the juncture. When the Red overflowed, it backed up the Assinibomie.

This happened two years ago, Mrs. Ludwig recalled, and so when a month ago the Red began to rise, she began to worry. "But people scoffed at the idea. No one did anything. They just laughed."

"I told them I didn't like the looks of the Red, but they said that was silly.

"Ten days ago my son had his appendix out and I was afraid something would happen with the river, but the doctor just laughed at me," the mother reported softly.

Short Notice

"Last Saturday at 9:45 in the morning, the hospital called to tell me to take Gerald out and gave me 45 minutes to do it. They would have to close a bridge then.

"Things kept getting worse and worse. Piles of sandbags were built up. All nonessential business stopped. Our main business street was only a line of pumps.

"They opened up all fresh air camps north of the city; the auditorium and schools for evacuees.

"People started getting misplaced. Families were divided and there were reports of drowning."

Then, smiling at her hosts, brother-in-law and sister-in-law, the Jack Ludwicks, grocery store operators, she said they managed to get space on a plane. It was jammed with children and old folks and took them to Minneapolis Sunday night.

They spent the night there and yesterday continued to Washington by plane.

Bond Issues Vote Planned In Fairfax

Fairfax County citizens will decide May 31 whether or not to borrow $10,500,000 for schools and $980,000 for additions to the County Courthouse building.

The date on the referenda on the two bond issues was set yesterday by Circuit Court Judge Paul E. Brown.

The school bond issue, originally asked in petitions signed by some 3000 county residents, would pay for several new sites, construction, additions, alterations, furnishing and equipment of schoolhouses.

The school bond proposal was approved by the school board and the board of supervisors. The supervisors requested the Courthouse bond issuet referendum.

Enlargement of the courthouse, which would more than double the length of the preseent structure, would include space for school offices, agriculture and home demonstration units, health department and others now in rented space costing close to $15,000 a year.

A modern jail on the second floor of the proposed structure, with separate detention rooms for adults and juveniles, would replace the present antiquated jail from which many prisoners have escaped.

Once withdrawn by the school board, the school bond issue petition was resubmitted after an annexation court decided a pending Falls Church annexation suit against Fairfax County would not jeopardize the legality of the school loan.

Vandenberg Visits Briefly On Capitol Hill

By The Associated Press

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) paid a surprise visit to the Capitol yesterday and disclosed that he has undergone five operations in the past two months.

The Senator—Republican leader in foreign affairs—visited the Capitol barber shop for a shave and haircut.

"This is just a trial run," he told reporters. He said he hopes to return often but that he has no plans as yet for resuming work.

Vandenberg underwent an operation last fall for removal of part of a lung. He came here for the opening of Congress but soon was forced to return again to the hospital.

He had a tumor removed from near his spine and friends said doctors hoped they had corrected the cause of his long illness. But there had been no reports of other operations until the Senator disclosed them himself.

The Senator's wife also has been seriously ill but is reported to be improved. Both have returned to their Wardman Park Hotel apartment.

I WAS THERE AND I KNOW!

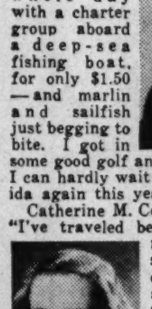
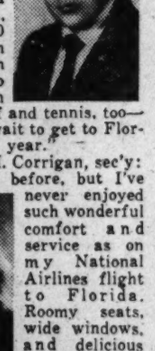
John Wade, information clerk: "A family man has to hunt the best vacation bargain possible — and I've found it! Florida in summer offers everything the millionaires enjoy in winter — at about one-tenth the price. We took lots of sightseeing tours while we were in Miami, and the youngsters sure got a kick out of seeing The Little White House at Key West."



Phyllis Nelson, Production assistant: "Imagine paying only $2 a day for a room in those swank ocean-front hotels! The beautiful room I had costs plenty in winter, believe me. When you work hard the rest of the year, you really appreciate living in such luxury for two whole weeks—I felt like a queen!



Joan Crosby, account executive: "I was a little doubtful about climate when I chose Florida for last summer's vacation, but now I'm sold! There was a cool ocean breeze day and night, and the temperature average was only 80.6°. Another thing I especially liked was the uncrowded beaches. Plenty of space to stretch out and relax!"

Howard Ahlemeyer, Jr., salesman: "Man, oh man, the wonderful fishing that Florida offers in summer! A whole day with a charter group aboard a deep-sea fishing boat, for only $1.50 — and marlin and sailfish just begging to bite. I got in some good golf and tennis, too—I can hardly wait to get to Florida again this year."

Catherine M. Corrigan, sec'y: "I've traveled before, but I've never enjoyed such wonderful comfort and service as on my National Airlines flight to Florida. Roomy seats, wide windows, and delicious food. What makes it best of all is that comfort and service were combined with National's low summer fares!"

Auchincloss Files Another Home Rule Bill

Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.) yesterday filed a new home rule "compromise" bill in the House.

It calls for giving the District an elected but nonvoting delegate in the House and for reorganizing the municipal government into 12 major departments under the Commissioners. Neither an elected city council nor an elected school board is provided.

Election of both council and school board have been major home rule features of earlier bills sponsored by Auchincloss. He dropped them from the new bill to minimize opposition.

Auchincloss was the second man to sign the petition now before the House to take the Senate-passed home rule bill of Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.) out of the hands of the District Committee which tabled it, and present it to a House vote. The petition would take effect upon being signed by 218 members and to date it has 180 signatures.

Auchincloss sai dthat, even if the discharge petition succeeded, he fears the "determined opposition" to home rule will filibuster the bill to death.

Auchincloss' new bill is similar on two counts to one recently introduced by Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.). Harris' bill includes the delegate and reorganization features, but also contains provision for an elected school board.

Auchincloss said he left out the school board election feature because he feels the "determined opposition" will apply the same objections to that as they did to the elected council.

4 in Mt. Rainier Sued for $25,000 By Area Woman

Baltimore, May 15 (AP).—A Washington area woman today asked $25,000 in damages from a neighbor at Mount Rainier and three peace officers, charging they accused her falsely of being drunk and swearing.

Mrs. Robert B. Barker, wife of a Washington and Marysville, Tenn., attorney, filed the action in Federal court here.

The defendants are Norman Robbins, a neighbor of the Barkers in Mount Rainier; Magistrate Harry Fiddesop, justice of the peace at Hyattsville, and Patrolmen Charles J. Burke and Walter C. Scott of the Mount Rainier police force.

Atlantic Pact Ministers Begin Delicate Task Of Balancing Purses Against Military Needs

London, May 15 (AP).—The 12 nations of the Atlantic Pact took stock today on how their political defenses are standing up to Communist pressure.

The secret day-long session was an opener to important decisions to be made in view of a reported general agreement that there must be quick action to bolster the armed forces of the West.

The Foreign Ministers of the 12 nations were faced with the delicate task of balancing the purses of the members against the reported views of their military men that full-scale defenses should be set up by 1952. In the view of the generals, Russia may be at a peak in her expanding armament program by that time or shortly afterward, and may be tempted into aggressive ventures if the West is unprepared.

Finance Ministers of the pact nations have expressed dismay at the list of guns, divisions, bases and other installations and equipment submitted by the Defense Committee. They fear the cost would wreck economic recovery and open their countries to Communist political infiltration.

Some of the pact countries have said they looked to the United States, already pumping out a billion dollars worth of guns, tanks and B-29s to its partners, for even greater help.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson was expected to counter these suggestions by pointing out that America is spending a greater percentage of its national income for defense than is any other North Atlantic nation.

Acheson, British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin and French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman ended a three-power conference Saturday by expressing firm belief that preponderant resources of the Western World allow it to set up strong enough defenses without halting economic progress.

They also resolved to draw Western Germany firmly into the wall of western family of nations and keep their occupation troops in the first line of defense there.

Acheson presided at today's session at Lancaster House.

After the session a brief comunique said the ministers reviewed the "progress achieved" by the treaty powers in the past year and had "an exchange of views on world political developments" affecting their security and well-being.

The report of the Defense Committee has not been made public, but diplomatic informants say it calls for a standing force in western Europe of some 30 divisions, with France making the major manpower contribution. Air support would be supplied mostly by Britain and the United States.

Britain Tells Czechs to Close London Institute 'Forthwith'

London, May 15 (U.P.).—Britain ordered the Communist Czechoslovak government today to close its Czechoslovak Institute here "forthwith" and to stop "immediately" its embassy's distribution of literature.

The British action was taken in swift retaliation for the banning by the Prague government of the British information and cultural services in Czechoslovakia last week.

The United States, in a similar move, had cut the strength of Czechoslovak diplomatic personnel and closed the Czechoslovak consulates in Cleveland and Pittsburgh.

A note delivered to the Szechoslovak Embassy by the Foreign Office accused Czech Communist authorities of "discourtesy and obstructive treatment" of British officials and their wives in Prague, and said Czechs who visited the British Institute there were threatened by police.

The British note said Communist authorities compelled students to promise in writing they would not visit the British Institute after they had first been seen there.

Foreign Undersecretary Ernest Davies, announcing the Government's note in the House of Commons, explained the Czechs had refused to renew the five-year British-Czechoslovak cultural convention of 1947 as well as closing the British council and information service in Prague.

2 U. S. Fliers Freed by Reds Flying Home

Manila, P. I. (Tuesday), May 16 (U.P.). — Two American fliers who were held for 19 months as Chinese Communist prisoners left here on a Navy plane early today en route to Pearl Harbor and home.

Navy CPO William C. Smith, 32, of Long Beach, Calif., and Marine M/Sergt. Elmer C. Bender, 27, of Cincinnati and Chicago, made a brief stopover here on their flying trip from Hongkong.

They arrived at Hongkong yesterday aboard the United States destroyer Floyd Parks, smoking cigars and grinning.

The two men appeared pale and drawn but showed no other signs of ill effects after their long imprisonment.

Naval officers said the fliers would not be allowed to tell their stories for publication until they have reported to Pearl Harbor to Admiral Arthur G. Radford, commander of the Seventh Fleet.

Comdr. Merle MacBain, public information officer of the Seventh Fleet, said the two men were held in various village jails between the time of their capture and their unexplained release May 3.

The Communists had ignored several official American protests against their confinement.

When the pair asked about their release, the Communists told them "Wait until there's a revolution in the United States and then you can go back," the public information officer said.

Eugene Ormandy Weds Pilot, Navy Veteran

Philadelphia, May 15 (AP).—Maestro Eugene Ormandy, 50, was married today to Vienna-born Margaret Frances Hitsch, a longtime friend of the Philadelphia Orchestra conductor.

Judge Nochem S. Winnet performed the ceremony at City Hall. The bride is 41, came to the United States 12 years ago, became a citizen and later joined the Navy. A licensed pilot, she was stationed at Norfolk, Va., during the war.

Four Arab States Ask League to Oust Jordan

Cairo, May 15 (AP).—Six member states of the Arab League declared today that Hashemite Jordan violated the league charter by annexing Arab Palestine April 24.

Egypt, Syria, Lebanon and Saudi Arabia recommended that Jordan be ousted from the league, but Yemen and Iraq asked for a delay.

Point 4 Help Compromised At $35 Million

House and Senate conferees finally agreed yesterday to authorize 35 millions dollars for the Point Four program of technical help to backward areas.

This was 10 million less than the Administration request, which the Senate had approved on May 5, but it was 10 million more than the House had voted on March 31.

To get this compromise the conferees had to accept elaborate language, insisted on by the House, promising fair treatments to American investors in undeveloped countries. The Senate had stricken such language from its version of the bill.

Agreement on Point Four removed the last stumbling block from final agreement on the whole foreign aid bill, authorizing $3,121,450,000 for relief and recovery measures all over the world.

Provisions of Compromise

Both Houses now have to approve the compromise bill which provides:

For the third year of the Marshall Plan in Europe, $2,850,000,000.

For economic recovery in Korea, 100 million.

For economic help in Formosa and "the general area of China," 94 million unexpended from this year's funds.

For the relief of Arab refugees, $27,450,000.

Four Point Four, 35 million; and

For international welfare work among children, 15 million, which the President can use either as a contribution to the United Nations or to the existing International Children's Emergency Fund.

Labor Loses Battle

American labor organizations lost a hard fought battle when the conferees deleted House-approved language calling for collective bargaining in the undeveloped areas.

The conferees did, however, keep House language promising that American private investors would "conserve as well as develop local resources" and would provide "adequate wages and working conditions for local labor."

The bill as approved also said investors should not be deprived of their property without compensation, should have "reasonable freedom" to manage their enterprises, and should have nondiscriminatory treatment generally. It also sets up an advisory board of private citizens, including businessmen, to help in carrying out the Point Four program.

Private Investors Assured

The conferees agreed on similar assurances to private investors in connection with the Marshall Plan. After almost two solid days of argument, they agreed to guarantee private investors against "expropriation or confiscation" by the government of any Marshall Plan country.

The House wanted a more-sweeping guarantee against war, riot or revolution, but the Senate conferees dug their toes in and won approval of the more limited language.

U. S. Sentences German Police

Berlin, May 15 (AP).—The Russian Zone People's Police was condemned by a United States court today as a military force imbued with hatred and fanaticism typical of the Hitler era.

The court sentenced six of its troopers to two-year prison terms after convicting them of wearing military uniforms and carrying arms in the United States sector of Berlin on April 13.

Pronouncing sentence, Judge John A. Sabo of Gary, Ind., assailed the whole police system in east Germany as "a definite menace to the peace of the world." He accused Soviet zone authorities of organizing a full-fledged army under the guise of a police force, in violation of four-power rules against rearming Germany.

Seretse Khama's White Queen Has 7-Pound Baby Daughter

Johannesburg, May 15 (AP).—Auburn-haired Ruth Khama, hailed by Bamangwato tribesmen as their white queen, gave birth to a girl at least a month prematurely today, British authorities announced.

Exiled Seretse Khama, Negro chief of the tribe, was not present at the hospital in Serowe, mud-hut tribal capital in Bechuanaland. But British autrorities gave the young chief permission at once to leave Lobatsi, 200 miles south on the Transvaal border where he had been waiting, for a four-week visit.

The baby girl some day may claim rule over the tribe. Ruth, a London stenographer, married Seretse in London in October, 1948. Their child's name probably will be Jacqueline Khama.

The girl child was delivered by a native doctor named Molkangoa after a short labor, and both the infant and mother were described as "doing fine." The baby weighed about 7 pounds 2 ounces.

Ruth previously had rejected an offer of British medical care. She had said she did not expect her first child until late in June.

As news spread of the birth, Bamangwato tribesmen gathered outside the hospital. There was little excitement, according to reports reaching here, but there may be when Seretse returns to his sprawling capital.

The chief will be allowed to stay one week with Ruth, and three weeks touring his cattle posts in the tribal reserve to gather evidence for a lawsuit against his uncle, Tshekedi Khama, former regent.

Tshekedi led tribal elders in a political fight to prevent his nephew from assuming the throne

Soviet Gold SMUGGLING

by SYLVIA F. PORTER

Russia is now smuggling vast fortunes in gold bars and coins to her agents in key spots of the world—in Sweden, France, Italy, Switzerland, Tangiers, Hongkong, Macao.

Inside reports are that the Soviet's shipments of this most precious of all monetary metals just in the last 15 weeks run far above $200,000,000, may even surpass the $300,000,000 mark.

This places her gold shipments on an extraordinarily high level, for in these times, gold movements of this magnitude are rare for any nation except America.

They're virtually unprecedented for the Soviet Union.

The gold is being taken out of her metal reserves, is being loaded on Russian steamers, is being shipped from such ports as Vladivostok to such ports as Marseilles and is then being rerouted to the Soviet's financial agents in the chosen areas.

It is not being done "officially"; no announcement of the shipments has been made, of course.

But from Zurich comes the story of large arrivals of gold bars "in transit." And the bars have been identified as Russian.

From Tangiers and Macao comes the tale of the sudden appearance of big bags of gold coins and bars. And the bags bear not only the stamp of the USSR but also carry the stampings of the original owners — "Reichsbank, 1912." "Federal Reserve Bank, 1932." (It was in 1932 and 1933 that gold was fleeing the U. S. for "safer" havens.)

When General Eisenhower addressed the nation's newspaper publishers in New York recently, he urged them to seek clues to Russia's plans in her commercial and economic transactions. For, often deals in this area reveal more than a thousand diplomatic maneuvers.

What then has the Politburo in mind here? What might these vast gold shipments imply to us?

We know how deeply the Soviet treasures her gold hoard—variously estimated at from 2 to 5 billion dollars. Why then is she sending such fortunes outside her borders and doing it "unofficially" too?

We know that spies are traditionally paid in gold and Russia surely pays off hers in metal as we surely pay off ours. But what sort of espionage could possibly warrant this level of smuggling?

I've been checking with financiers who study and deal in these mysterious markets. They see three explanations.

First, Russia is building up gold hoards in key spots for future "dumping" purposes—is getting set to dump gold in the global markets to drive down its price at crucial moments.

She already has dumped plenty of the metal. Her sales in Paris, Tangiers, etc., during February and March were a major factor in the sensational slump in the world black market prices for gold.

The reason: to bewilder and terrify the industrialists of Europe and Africa who completely distrust paper money, have faith only in gold as a measure of value and their own fortunes. When the world gold price crashes, their confidence is bitterly shaken, their willingness to invest in and continue business activities is deeply undermined.

Officially, Russia would not sell gold on the black markets. Unofficially, she could — and she has dumped and she will dump to wage economic and psychological warfare on the West.

Second, Russia is creating these hoards in outside spots so she can pick up foreign currencies when she wants them—the pound, the dollar, etc. —at prices much below the official rates.

For gold still will buy any currency at a discount in the world markets. And again, the economic and psychological advantages to the Soviet are clear.

Finally, Russia is getting in position to wage a ruble offensive against the pound and the dollar, to back her currency with gold in fact as well as fancy —when and if she's ready to move.

The ruble bloc will go on the offensive against the dollar and sterling blocs when Russia can swing it. It is another clue.

This is international money-juggling in the classical tradition. A pattern of competition and conflict is being drawn—and Russia is seizing upon every weapon the capitalist nations ever devised.

If we fail to act positively on our own in this sphere, we will commit an unpardonable blunder. No, a criminal blunder. (from the New York Post)

stone in Turkey's steady march toward a fuller democracy."

Modern Turkey was a one-party state until 1945. In the previous election, in 1946, the opposition had just been formed into the Democrat Party, and it was too feebly organized to have much effect at the polls.

Today the Democrats are supported generally by business elements who oppose tight government controls. They also have thrown out a bid for labor support by emphasizing the right to strike, now denied to Turkey's 500,000 industrial workers.

If the Democrats really win, there probably will be greater encouragement to private enterprise, and a normal reaction against a strong Government.

Would End Inonu Rule

One important effect of a Democrat victory would be the disappearance from office of President Inonu, the chief lieutenant of the late Ataturk Kemal, in the founding of modern Turkey, and the pilot of the new country through the dangerous war and postwar years.

Inonu, Party Appear Out

won the election and will form a government."—Editor's note.]

Some observers said Inonu's party may have no more than 80 seats when the Assembly meets Monday to elect a new President. The nationalist Nation's Party seemed likely to have four or five seats.

There were rumors in Ankara, the capital, that Inonu would retire immediately, but this was generally discounted. Informed sources said he likely will address the nation, perhaps Tuesday.

Bayar's victory surprised foreign observers. But it all stemmed from one simple issue: living costs are high, Turkey has been tottering on the brink of economic peril, and Bayar thundered away in his campaign that the government had done nothing about the situation.

The sweep lopped off 12 cabinet ministers, including Premier Shemsettin Gunaltay, Foreign Minister Necmeddin Sadak, and Cemil Sait Barlas, Minister for Coordination of the Marshall Plan in Turkey.

The government's first acknowledgement of defeat came tonight when it issued a partial list sowing Democratic victory in 35 Provinces. It promised another partial list later but said it could not predict when full returns will be in.

Inonu's government maintained silence over the political upset.

Inonu, president since 1938, was seeking a fourth four-year term. His People's Party has controlled the government ever since Ataturk overthrew the old sultanate (monarchy) in 1923. He was president until 12 years ago when Inonu succeeded him.

organization order—which probably will be announced today—provides:

(1) Reequipping one F-82 (night fighter) group with Republic F-84E fighter-bombers, and allocation of at least half of its available training time to working with ground troops. The remainder will be devoted to training in escorting strategic bombers.

(2) A reorganization of Continental Air Command, under which Maj. Gen. Robert Lee's Tactical Air Command will regain operational control of fighter-bomber and troop carrier forces. Two years ago when Continental Air Command was formed, all of TAC's combat units were taken away and given to the new command. TAC became simply a subordinate headquarters for planning and were assigned combat forces only for maneuvers.

Under the order, TAC is assigned (under Continental Air Command's supervision) control over three troop carrier groups, one fighter-bomber group (F-84s) full time, two fighter-bomber groups at least half time, the USAF's lone light bomber group made up of two B-45 jet squadrons, one tactical reconnaisance and one liaison unit. It'll also have an assault squadron and a two-target squadron.

(3) Brig. Gen. W. R. Wolfinbarger's provisional tactical air force, set up last summer at Pope Air Force Base, N. C., in an effort to improve the tactical air picture, also will be strengthened by addition of more full-time staff officers, early warning radar, radio, administrative and support forces. It will receive a tactical control group, a motor transport squadron, a radio relay squadron, an air base squadron and a signal battalion.

Norstad to Be Acting Vice Chief of AF Staff

Lieut. Gen. Lauris Norstad, 43, was named acting vice chief of staff of the Air Force last night, succeeding Gen. Muir S. Fairchild, 54, who died March 17.

TAC will assign combat forces to Wolfinbarger's mobile field headquarters for the actual field exercises.

This step partially carries out a recommendation made by Lieut. Gen. Lauris Norstad growing out of "Operation Swarmer," an airborne maneuver recently held in the Carolinas. Norstad, who commanded Swarmer, proposed that the "major elements of a joint airborne task force" be established permanently.

Meanwhile, the Air Force announced that its fourth B-36 bomber group will be based at Spokane, Wash.,

125 Million Loan Seen for Argentina

taking, especially in view of assurances that came from Buenos Aires.

Fari Treatment Sought

Since then the two governments have been busy negotiating a treaty guaranteeing fair treatment to American investors in Argentina. The negotiations are so far advanced that only five articles remain in dispute, and final agreement is expected in about a month.

The Argentine government has also removed many grievances of private American business; it has indicated that it would ratify the Rio treaty of hemisphere defense, would join the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, and, in due course, would seek admission to the International Bank and Monetary Fund.

The project before the National Advisory Council is for the Export-Import Bank to lend 125 million to a group of Argentine banks, backed by the unqualified guarantee of the Central Bank of Argentina.

A condition is that the loan be used solely to meet the commercial arrears of banks and individuals. The Export-Import Bank will pay the money to New York banks, on cabled authority from the Argentine central bank, and the New York banks will then transmit the money to the Americans who have been waiting for months and years for Peron to pay his debts.

Similar Loans Made

Since the war the Export-Import Bank has made dollars available in similar fashion to Canada and Chile, and in 1937, when the bank was new, it made an almost identical arrangement guaranteeing the claims of Americans on Brazil.

Peron has said repeatedly that he was not seeking a government-to-government loan. He will contend, no doubt, that this is a transaction between the Export-Import Bank and American individuals. Actually it is a government-to-government loan with the thinnest of disguises, and it constitutes an act of high policy by both governments.

If the National Advisory Council approves it today, many details will remain to be ironed out before Peron's American creditors can get their money. The board of directors of the Export-Import Bank, a government agency, will not take final action until it reaches formal understandings with the Argentine authorities.

told him she had spent most of last night pinned to a rock in the swirling river, screaming for help.

He quoted her as saying:

"I don't remember very much about last night, except that I went for a walk in Prospect Park (on the American side). I don't remember getting into the water until I found myself pinned against the rock. I was really frightened then, I thought sure that I was going to die.

"All night long I hollered and hollered for help. The water was cold and I nearly froze since I had on only a dress. I remember praying."

Two park employes heard her screaming for help this morning and found her clinging to the rock, about 75 feet off shore.

Herbert Sedita fastened a rope about himself and waded toward Mrs. Bugay, but the swift current knocked him off his feet. His companion, John Paonessa, pulled him back.

Firemen tried to get a rowboat to her and, failing, they summoned the helicopter.

The pontoon-equipped craft landed on the water beside the woman. One of the pilots, Joseph A. Cannon, 30, of Niagara Falls, climbed out on a pontoon, looped a rope around Mrs. Bugay and started to move her to the helicopter when he lost his balance. The ship tipped over and the spinning rotor blades hit the water.

The impact shattered the plexiglass cockpit canopy and hurled Cannon and his companion, Owen Q. Niehaus, into the water.

Still hanging on to Mrs. Bugay, the pair climbed back aboard and waited for help.

Remington Loyalty Check To Be Made

NYHT News Service

Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer has ordered a new loyalty investigation of William W. Remington, Commerce Department economist, as a result of charges by two former Communists that he was once a Communist, it was disclosed yesterday.

The department's own loyalty board will check Remington's loyalty "from scratch," a spokesman for Sawyer said.

The House Un-American Activities Committee reopened the case on May 4, when it produced the testimony of the two former Communists—Howard Allen Bridgman and Kenneth McConnell — who swore they knew Remington as a Communist in 1936-37 when he worked for TVA at Knoxville, Tenn. He was then 19 years old.

Remington denied the charges under oath, declaring that he had never been a Communist or Communist sympathizer and did not even know McConnell. He admitted acquaintance with Bridgman, but denied attending Communist meetings with him.

Secretary Sawyer issued the review order after the Loyalty Review Board headed by Seth W. Richardson, which cleared Remington two years ago, turned down his request that it review the case again in the light of this new evidence.

The Richardson board held that the department's own loyalty board had primary jurisdiction in such cases and should, as a matter of proper procedure, make the initial recheck.

The findings of the departmental board will have to be reviewed eventually by the Richardson board, however.

In Few Weeks

Judy Coplon N. Y. Lawyer Will Marry

New York, May 15 (U.P.).—Judith Coplon, former Government girl convicted on espionage charges in Washington and New York, today said she expected to be married "within the next few weeks" to Albert H. Socolov, an associate of her court-appointed attorneys.

Miss Coplon, 28, is free on bail pending appeal of both her convictions. She said she met Socolov in the law offices of Neuburger, Shapiro, Rabinowitz and Boudin.

The attorney, 29, is a resident of Brooklyn, as is Miss Coplon, and served throughout the European war as a lieutenant in the combat engineers.

"We met sort of casually last January," Miss Coplon said. At that time Leonard Boudin of Soclov's firm was working with Miss Coplon's attorney on her appeal from her Washington conviction. Her New York trial, with Russian Valentin Gubitchev, was then in progress.

About a month later, Miss Coplon discharged her attorney, Archibald Palmer, and the court appointed Samuel Neuberger, Sidney Berman and Boudin to represent her.

"It wasn't until then that I really got to know him," Miss Coplon said. "He worked in the case."

"I believe Judy is innocent," Socolov said. "I am confident she will be vindicated by the courts. We are very much in love."

Miss Coplon said the couple's plans were "pretty indefinite." She said they had set no time or place for their wedding and don't know where they will make their home.

Mrs. Draper A Communist, Budenz Says

Hartford, Conn., May 15 (AP).—Louis Budenz today named Mrs. Muriel Draper and the Rev. William Howard Melish as members of the Communist Party.

Budenz, formerly managing editor of the Communist Daily Worker, testified in the trial of a $200,000 libel suit brought by Mrs. Draper's son, Paul, the dancer, and Larry Adler, harmonica player, against Mrs. John T. McCullough of Greenwich, Conn.

The two claim she damaged their reputation by tagging them "pro-Communist in sympathy."

Budenz, now a Fordham University professor, was asked by MacDonald Dewitt, defense counsel, about the connection of Mrs. Draper with the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship.

"Yes, sir; she is a member of the Communist Party," Budenz said.

Dewitt then asked about Melish, Brooklyn clergyman who became chairman of the National Council.

"Yes, sir; I know that he is a Communist Party member," Budenz replied.

In New York, Melish laughingly declined to comment on Budenz's charges.

"That's the same old story," he said. "It has all been said and denied before."

Melish's father, the Rev. John Howard Melish, was ousted last year as rector of Brooklyn's Holy Trinity Episcopal Church in a controversy over the "outside activities" of his son, the assistant rector.

Budenz said that on the instructions of the Politburo he questioned Melish "as to how deeply he was affiliated with the party" before the clergyman became head of the National Council. The witness said he reported to the Politburo that Melish was "thoroughly sound and thoroughly loyal" to Communist principles.

Budenz said the council was designed to establish "a core of supporters of Soviet Russia under any or all circumstances."

Both Draper and Adler have admitted aiding the National Council for Soviet-American Friendship. The defense introduced evidence today purporting to show that Draper's mother was chairman of a women's committee of the council.

Draper testified earlier that his mother is sympathetic toward Russia but denied she is a Communist.

Budenz said the Communists have been calling him a pathological liar and a paid informer ever since he leveled charges against Gerhart Eisler in 1946.

Clash on Health Plan Marks Chicago Rally

Chicago, May 15 (U.P.).—Top-ranking Democrats stumped for Administration policies at home and abroad today but ran into opposition from the ranks on national health insurance.

The officials participated in panel discussions as part of the party's big Jefferson jubilee staged to mark the "150th anniversary of the triumph of Thomas Jefferson and Jeffersonian Democracy."

Truman In Address

President Truman brought the three-day rally, biggest in party history, to a climax tonight with a major address here. He rode in a parade through the city's Loop to the Chicago Stadium to speak.

His Cabinet members and other top-flight appointees used the panel platforms to explain the Administration position on national defense, deficit spending and welfare legislation.

Federal Security Administrator Oscar Ewing accused the medical profession of having raised three million dollars to block "all constructive approaches" to giving the Nation a health program.

Dr. R. B. Robins, national committeeman from Arkansas, arose from the audience after the scheduled speaker on welfare legislation finished, and challenged Ewing.

Robins charged that Ewing's agency is "one of the greatest pressure groups in America." He said the 1948 Democratic platform does not call for enactment of a health program.

The audience booed Robins. But the doctor warned that party support of Ewing's proposals for compulsory health insurance "will mean loss of Congress in the next election."

Ewing replied that the people support his program. Dr. Theodore M. Sanderson, New York, one of the scheduled speakers, charged that the American Medical Association, to which he belongs, is "the noisiest lobby of our time."

At a discussion of "the freedom budget—why national defense and international cooperation are good investments" W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the National Security Resources Board, warned the country may have less than "hours" to mobilize in event of war.

Symington said that "this Nation must now plan for instant conversion from peacetime to wartime footing," because a potential enemy can strike with "those modern weapons which we know he possesses."

Frederick W. Lawton, Budget Director, defended deficit spending at the same session. He said it has become necessary because of the "size and scope of the responsibilities we have assumed."

The 1951 budget, Lawton said, "represents the dollar cost of meeting the heaviest responsibilities we have ever known short of actual war."

Leon H. Keyserling, newly-appointed chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said the Administration fiscal policies prevented the 1949 recession from turning into "something as serious as what happened between 1920 and 1922." He said national income dropped 30 percent in those years.

Speakers at the various panels included Secretary of Labor Maurice J. Tobin, Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer, Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan, Secretary of Interior Oscar Chapman, Secretary of Army Frank Pace, Secretary of Navy Francis Matthews and Undersecretary of State James E. Webb.

3 Alexandrians Indicted in Wave Of Car Breaks

Three Alexandria youths charged with stealing radios and other equipment from parked automobiles in Alexandria and Arlington were indicted by a Fairfax County Circuit Court grand jury yesterday for grand larceny.

Two of the youths, Benton L. Hitt, jr., 21, 217 S. Patrick st., Alexandria, and Robert L. Almond, 807 Duke st., Alexandria, pleaded guilty at a hearing after their indictment, Hitt to eight counts and Almond to six counts. Both are in Fairfax jail.

The third, Sherwood A. Bugg, 18, 511 N. Columbus st., Alexandria pleaded not guilty to two counts under the indictment. He is free on $1000 bond.

Frank Preston Rose, 28, of Lorton, Va., was indicted on charges of attempted rape. Arrested on April 22, he is free on $10,000 bond.

Truman Urges Defeat of 'Obstructionists'

more "worthwhile" measures, he predicted.

He said strong opposition from "various oddly assorted groups" has slowed down its progress, but "despite the efforts of these men, the Eighty-First Congress is moving forward."

Mr. Truman's thrusts at the Republican party as such was limited pretty much to the same kind of ridicule he directed at Thomas E. Dewey in the last campaign.

He said he had been "followed around" on this trip by a representative of theirs (Senate GOP Campaign Director Victor Johnston) just as he accused Dewey of following him in the last campaign. He even quoted the little verse he used to read about Dewey:

"I have a little shadow,
"That goes in and out with me,
"And what can be the use of him
"Is more than I can see."

What He Found on Trip

"Some Republican politicians don't seem to think the President should visit with the people," he told the Jefferson Jubilee throng.

"I don't know what my little shadow expected to find on this trip. But I'll tell you what he did find.

"He found that the people like to have their elected officials come out and talk with them face to face.

"And that is what I propose to keep right on doing."

Listing 10 forward "accomplishments" of the Eighty-first Congress, ranging from ratification of the North Atlantic Pact and extension of the Marshall Plan to public housing and minimum wage laws, he credited the present Congress with a "great" contribution to world peace and a "substantial advance" in the welfare of the people.

Then he gave a pat on the back to Senate Majority Leader Scott W. Lucas, now in a tight election race in this State with former Republican Representative Everett M. Dirksen. Mr. Truman said Lucas is "entitled to the gratitude of the entire Nation" for his success in getting that much of his program through the Senate.

Praises Senator Douglas

"I can tell you from my own experience, it is no easy job to guide things through the United States Senate," he said.

He called freshman Senator Paul Douglas of this State a "worthy partner" for Lucas.

In promising to carry on the fight for the unenacted portion of his program "this year, next year and the following," the President listed as unfinished business the 10 points he reserved for major speeches on this transcontinental swing.

He promised to fight (1) for international cooperation and against isolationism, (2) for repeal of the Taft-Hartley Act, (3) for improved Social Security laws, (4) for Federal aid to education, (5) for low-income and middle-income housing, (6) for (insurance) health legislation, (7) for natural resource (Valley) development, (8) for a Brannan plan farm law fair to producers and consumers, (9) for his new small-business program and (10) for equal rights and anti-discrimination legislation.

Admits He "Dreams"

He told the crowd the two biggest jobs facing the Nation involve lifting the standard of living of the American people and collective action to assure peace in the world.

"These tasks are all difficult, long and expensive," he said. "But we will not shrink from them, for they are the way to peace."

Mr. Truman said "sour critics" have lately been saying his hopes for the future are "just idle dreams."

"I do dream of making our country a better place to live in," he said.

"The Democratic Party would deserve to be retired from office, and hustled off to the ashheap of history, if it ever stopped dreaming of what we can do to make our country better."

Arriving here late last night, Mr. Truman sallied forth from his Blackstone Hotel suite only twice today before joining the parade to the Chicago Stadium tonight.

Bright and early this morning he took a 30-minute walk along the lake front. And in the afternoon he drove to St. Luke's Hospital to visit with former Democratic National Chairman Edward J. Flynn. Flynn, chairman of the resolutions committee at this interim party meeting, suffered a mild heart attack yesterday.

Mr. Truman lunched in his suite with a dozen national and State party leaders and later dined privately with Mrs. Truman and Margaret. Guests at the luncheon included Democratic National Chairman Boyle, Senators Lucas and Douglas, Gov. Adlai Stevenson, Mayor Martin H. Kennelly, former Mayor Edward J. Kelly, and Jake Arvey, Cook County Democratic chairman.

Earlier, the President's brother, Vivian Truman, and a cousin, Maj. Gen. Ralph Truman, retired, called on him in his rooms.

New England Industry Jobs To Be Surveyed by Economists

Leon H. Keyserling, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, named seven prominent economists yesterday to study and report on unemployment and declining industry in New England.

The seven-man committee, headed by Prof. Charles I. Gragg of the Harvard Business School, will meet with a council representative in Boston May 20 to organize for the study.

Keyserling announced the project in letters to the seven committee members—all faculty members of colleges in the Northeast. He said the committee's final report on ways of strengthening the New England economy is expected about August 1.

Keyserling said the committee was the outgrowth of a meeting in Boston last week between John D. Clark, vice chairman of the council, and 15 New England economists. He said the New England report will cover in general these questions:

1. What can be done by private initiative and by Federal, State and local governments to solve the problems of "spot areas" of unemployment or declining industry?

2. What are the principal industrial, natural resource, and other economic opportunities in New England open to early exploitation to supplement older and possibly declining industries? How may they be overcome, in such fields as transportation, taxes, electric power, labor mobility, provision of equity capital, and technical improvement in plant, equipment, and management?

Other members of the "Committee of Experts on the New England Economy" are George H. Ellis, University of Maine; Lyle C. Fitch, Wesleyan University; Seymour Harris, Harvard University; John A. Hogan, University of New Hampshire; Philip H. Lohman, University of Vermont, and Alfred C. Neal, vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston.

New Plan Filed For Waltham Firm

Boston, May 15 (AP).—Court-appointed trustees of the closed Waltham Watch Co. today filed a new reorganization plan in U. S. District Court in an attempt to re-establish the century-old firm.

The plan calls for a reduction from 4 percent to 3¾ percent of the interest rate on a four-million-dollar, 10-day Reconstruction Finance Corporation loan, now in default.

Under the plan, the company would pay one million dollars of the loan by the end of 1950 while the remaining three million dollars would be extended from 10 years to 15 years.

1944 Convention Chaplain Urges President To 'Quit Playing With Truth' About Tour

Chicago, May 15 (AP).—A minister who was a 1944 Democratic convention chaplain says President Truman should "quit playing with truth" and the people should cease "state idolatry."

Dr. Anderson

He said in effect that Chicago Democrats offended Christians with their ballyhoo for Sunday's program of the national party conference, and are using "Hollywood beauties" and movie cowboys to build up political rally crowds.

The Rev. Harrison Ray Anderson talked on "The New Idolatry—State Worship" in a Sunday sermon from his Fourth Presbyterian Church pulpit.

He was chaplain of the 1944 Chicago convention at which Mr. Truman was nominated for vice president.

He declared the American people are "getting weary of being kidded" by Mr. Truman about his so-called "non-political" western tour. The minister said:

"President Truman would be welcome in any city or town on a political or non-political trip. But why call this lost journey and the Chicago weekend anything other than what it is?"

Dr. Anderson assailed politicians who, he said, use deception "when government becomes a God to be worshipped." He added:

"The conscience of the Christian people of this Nation is being offended in a dozen other serious ways. When the State becomes a God, morals go."

He read a Chicago Democratic advertisement in a Sunday newspaper urging attendance at a public meeting of the President's Cabinet. The ad said:

"For the biggest Sunday of your life! See and hear Vice President Barkley."

Dr. Anderson said: "So the politicians give us our biggest Sunday. My Bible says God gave us that day and told us to keep it holy."

The minister said bond buyers who paid $75 for a war bond find 10 years later that the bond is worth only $60 in purchasing power and "not the $100 they thought they were promised."

Dirksen Says Truman Has 'Lost the Peace'

Former Representative Everett M. Dirksen, Illinois Republican senatorial candidate, accused President Truman yesterday of "blundering and mismanagement." He said signs multiply that the people are turning to the GOP for "salvation."

Getting in a lick before the President's political speech in Chicago last night, Dirksen said it must be evident to any discerning eye that "we have lost the peace and are fighting a costly rear-guard action, mainly with American dollars."

"How long does this go on and what costly scheme comes next to take up where present programs leave off?" he asked.

This apparently was a crack at the Marshall Plan, which Dirksen supported when in the House, but which he now calls money "poured down a rathole."

Dirksen will try to unseat Senator Scott Lucas, Democratic floor leader, in November in what has been forecast as a close contest.

His statement yesterday was issued through the Republican National Committee in reply to Mr. Truman's speech at Galesburg, Ill., last Monday.

Concerts in the formal gardens will be given by Blair High School and the Silver Spring Elks Club bands.

Baby's Bubble Bath Is Taken Sans Water!

Joyce, 3-year-old daughter of Mrs. Margaret Shedlock, of 1306 Saratoga ave. ne., got too solicitous for her 2½-months-old brother, Edward, yesterday. As a result, a Fire Department Rescue Squad, ambulance, and police scout car arrived.

Mrs. Shedlock had been preparing Joyce's bath, left momentarily. Joyce wanted Edward to smell the fragrant bubble bath salts. Upshot was a cascade of the salt into his face. He began to choke. Mrs. Shedlock called help. The baby was revived and taken to Children's Hospital where he was reported in good condition. Joyce's bath was six hours late.

Pennsylvania GOP Control at Stake Today

Philadelphia, May 15 (AP).—Republican voters in Pennsylvania nominate candidates for United States Senator and Governor Tuesday, with national interest focused on the primary election's impact on 1952 presidential maneuvering.

Gov. James H. Duff, a candidate for the United States Senate nomination, chose former Judge John S. Fine of the State Superior Court as his running mate for Governor. Duff said he was willing to "stake my political future" on a fight to oust the old-line party leadership.

Opposing Duff for the senatorial nomination is Representative John C. Kunkel, a six-term veteran from Harrisburg. Jay Cooke, Philadelphia banker and former city GOP chairman, and Judge Charles S. Williams of Lycoming County, are the other candidates for Governor.

The Democrats have a primary election also, but it has attracted little interest. Senator Francis Myers, Democratic Whip of the Senate, is unopposed for renomination, and Richardson Dilworth, Philadelphia city treasurer, is the organization-backed candidate for Governor.

Republican registration for the primary is 2,862,112; the Democrats total 1,926,216. In previous nonpresidential primaries, a total vote of 40 percent of the registration has been considered large.

Other nominations to be made on a State-wide basis are Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of Internal Affairs, and one post each on the Supreme and Superior Courts. Also to be nominated are candidates for the State's 33 congressional posts, 25 State Senators and 280 members of the State House of Representatives.

Polls open at 7 a. m. (EST) and close at 8 p. m. Because of the lengthy ballot definite indications of the result may not be known until some time Wednesday.

D. C. Heads Proclaim 'I Am American Day'

The District Commissioners yesterday issued a proclamation indorsing President Truman's designation of next Sunday as "I am an American Day."

The Commissioners urged patriotic, civic and educational organizations to conduct exercises Sunday and Monday "to pay honor to American citizenship."

Boy Regained In Air Chase

York Sunday night. There they chartered a plane for Montreal.

When they arrived, Mrs. Curtis said, they found the plane scheduled for the flight to England had not departed because of bad weather, and that Curtis and Henry were at The Inn, a hotel near the airport at Dorval, Quebec. This was at 3:30 a.m., yesterday.

Mrs. Curtis and Snell said that through the help of a Canadian immigration officer and John Latour, night manager of The Inn, they persuaded Curtis to attend a conference.

After the meeting the immigration officer, who had no authority to act in the case, suggested the disputants take the matter to the American Consulate.

Meantime, Attorney Jones said, he had made a kidnaping complaint here to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

When the party set out for the consulate, Mrs. Curtis refused to ride with her husband. She took the boy in a separate cab, along with Latour. On the way, she said, her driver pulled alongside the cab in which her husband and father rode. Mrs. Curtis' driver, she said, told the other driver to "get lost," which he did for a time.

Mrs. Curtis' driver then turned about and sped her and the boy back to the airport, where they boarded a Colonial Airlines plane for New York. Subsequently, Snell flew to New York. They returned here yesterday afternoon.

Back to the Airport

Jones said he will take the case into court in Arlington this week. Mrs. Mary M. Persinger, of Falls Church, Curtis' attorney, said she has not heard from him since before he left.

He did not tell her he planned the trip, she said, and "I'm glad, because if he had, I would have had to get him stopped."

Sesqui Committee Meets Wednesday

The Sesquicentennial Commission's executive committee is slated to meet Wednesday to detail plans for this year's program of special Sesqui events.

Carter T. Barron, Sesqui vice chairman, said he expected the Freedom Fair question would come up only to the extent of his formally reporting two weekend offers to help put the fair back into operation.

Last week the executive committee voted to abandon the fair chiefly on grounds it could not be legally operated by a nonprofit corporation.

Since then Morris Cafritz and Charles H. Tompkins, Washington real estate men, offered rent free a tract of nearly 200 acres a quarter of a mile south of the Pentagon.

Saturday Billy Rose, famed New York showman, wired Barron offering his services for the "price of one pound of tobacco."

The full commission may meet late this week to act on the executive committee's fair cancellation recommendation, Barron said.

He has been holding off on the full meeting pending return of President Truman, who is commission chairman.

CIO Bans All Segregation

The CIO yesterday banned all Negro-white segregation in the South or elsewhere on properties owned or leased by the union.

The order applies to offices, drinking fountains, washrooms, meeting places and other facilities.

In issuing the directive, CIO General Counsel Arthur J. Goldberg challenged any State or local "statute or ordinance" that would require the CIO to practice segregation.

"In some areas, local statutes have been used as a threat against CIO-affiliated councils which have endeavored to wipe out forms of segregation. In my opinion, any statute or ordinance which requires CIO organizations or bodies to practice segregation in any form are void because they violate the Constitution of the United States."

McCarthy's Carol

(After reading Senator McCarthy's speech at Atlantic City, we fall back on Lewis Carroll's "The Hunting of the Snark.")

"Just the place for a Snark!" the Bellman cried,
As he landed his crew with care;
Supporting each man on the top of the tide
By a finger entwined in his hair.

"Just the place for a Snark! I have said it twice:
That alone should encourage the crew.
Just the place for a Snark! I have said it thrice:
What I tell you three times is true."

P. S.—At the end of the hunt it was found that the snark was a boojum.

Save The Better Half

Majority Leader Lucas and other Administration supporters were among the 65 Senators voting to reject the plan for reorganizing the Treasury Department. Secretary of the Treasury Snyder made it clear that he did not favor the proposal to deprive the Comptroller of the Currency of the virtually independent status he now enjoys as supervisor of national banks. The Comptroller, of course, objected, and the American Bankers Association conducted a vigorous campaign against it. In the face of this strong opposition, it is not at all surprising that the plan was turned down so decisively. What is surprising is that the President urged its adoption despite the lack of Administration support.

As we pointed out in a recent editorial, this particular reorganization plan would do nothing to bring about centralization of responsibility for bank supervision and examination now shared by three Federal agencies—the Comptroller of the Currency, the Federal Reserve System and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. The present system should be reformed to remove the danger of future conflicts growing out of this division of authority. But substantive legislation is required to effect it. The rejected reorganization plan would merely have weakened the influence of the Comptroller of the Currency; it would not have contributed to a solution of the problems resulting from divided responsibility. For that matter, the President would have been exceeding the authority granted him under the reorganization act if he had tried to reform the present system by Executive order.

The part of the plan which would strengthen the position of the Secretary of the Treasury is a move in the right direction. It is to be hoped that the President will make another attempt at reorganizaion of the Treasury by deleting from the plan the controversial feature affecting the status of the Comptroller of the Currency.

Tideland Leases

Harold L. Ickes has injected an interesting question into the tangled tideland oil controversy. He has submitted a petition, or suggestion, to the Supreme Court arguing that the interim agreements entered into between the Federal Government and the State of California, pending final adjudication of outstanding issues in connection with the so-called tidelands, are illegal, null and void.

The term tidelands is properly applied only to the submerged strip lying between the low-water and high-water levels. The Federal Government has never claimed possession of this area or of the inland waters of California. It claimed, and was awarded by the Supreme Court in 1947, paramount rights in the marginal sea, the area lying seaward of the low-water mark and outside the State's inland waters. A master appointed by the court is now engaged in the painstaking business of drawing a line along the coast of California to determine precisely where the tidelands and inland waters end and the marginal sea begins. Until this line is authoritatively drawn and certified by the Supreme Court, no one can say with certainty whether a particular segment of submerged land lies within the jurisdiction of California or of the United States.

Meanwhile, exploitation of the submerged oil fields must go forward without interruption. Wells were drilled under leases granted in good faith by California prior to the Supreme Court decision of 1947; they cannot be abandoned without senseless waste. New wells must be drilled to prevent drainage of oil or gas from submerged lands by wells drilled in other lands. Accordingly, the Attorney General of the United States and the Attorney General of California made an agreement authorizing the California lessees to continue operation and to drill new wells if necessary, and providing for the segregation in a special fund of all rents and royalties received.

Mr. Ickes says that neither of the parties to this agreement had any right or authority to make it. Congress has adopted no legislation concerning management of the marginal sea. And the Attorney General has ruled that the Federal Mineral Leasing Act does not apply to submerged lands. Therefore, says Mr. Ickes, no legal authority was vested in any Federal official to grant leases or to delegate to California the authority to do so. This seems to us to be a narrow view of the Attorney General's power. We presume that he has authority to take emergency action of the sort adopted in this situation to protect vital interests of the United States.

Nevertheless, Mr. Ickes' petition to the Supreme Court makes very clear the need for legislation to determine Federal policy about the marginal sea. The Justice and Interior Departments have submitted bills for this purpose but they have been pigeonholed for two years; they have never been reported out of committee in either House of Congress. Instead, the House Judiciary Committee has again given a favorable report to quitclaim legislation which would give away a tremendous national heritage vital to the country's security. A responsible policy for Federal administration of what the Supreme Court has declared to be within the Federal domain is urgently required. Perhaps Mr. Ickes' petition should have been addressed to Congress.

Old-Age Benefits

In a previous editorial The Washington Post has discussed the provisions for extending old-age insurance coverage under the bill passed by the House at the last session and the Senate Finance Committee bill. The proposals in regard to coverage are in both cases inadequate, since they exclude millions of workers who should have insurance protection, but they are at least a step forward, bringing nearer the ultimate goal of all-in coverage. Both measures would also reduce the numbers of the aged dependent on public and private charity by providing for substantial increases in old-age benefits. At present the average primary benefit for an insured worker is only $26 a month, and the scale of benefit payments has remained practically unchanged for more than a decade, although living costs are about 70 percent above the level of 1939.

Under the House bill average primary benefits to workers already on the retirement rolls would be increased to $44—just enough to offset the rise in living costs—while the Senate bill would raise the average primary benefit to about $49, an increase of 90 percent. In both cases increases would be proportionately greater for the low-benefit groups than for the high-benefit groups. Both bills would raise minimum primary benefits from the present minimum of $10 to $25, and the maximum family benefit from $85 to $150. Either program would provide reasonably adequate subsistence benefits for the great majority of workers, although average payments would still be below the average amounts paid to recipients of old-age assistance by quite a number of the States. Since one of the strong arguments in favor of a higher scale of insurance benefits is that it would reduce the pressure for expansion of federally-aided State assistance programs, we are in favor of the somewhat higher scale of insurance benefits recommended by the Senate Finance Committee.

The old-age insurance system covers high-paid as well as low-paid workers and provides some protection against loss of wages. Although heavily weighted in favor of low-income wage earners, benefits are, nevertheless, related to earnings, with the result that better paid workers may qualify for higher pensions. In short, the old-age insurance system is not designed solely for the benefit of the poor man. A decade ago 97 percent of all workers in covered employment earned less than $3000, the maximum wages in which benefits are calculated. Consequently benefits were with few exceptions based on the total earnings of the insured, whereas today only 76 percent of the workers earn less than $3000. Consequently, owing to the rise in wages, it would be necessary to raise the base to $4800 to cover all the wages of even 95 percent of the workers insured. That should be done, as Commissioner Altmeyer of the Social Security Administration says, to provide more adequate compensation for wage losses on retirement and also to offset demands for industry-wide pension plans. The House bill, however, sets the maximum wage on which benefits may be computed at only $3600, while the Senate bill leaves it unchanged at $3000. As a result, workers in the higher wage brackets would have inadequate protection against wage loss under both bills.

The Senate bill, however, greatly liberalizes the eligibility requirements of the present law, thus enabling more aged people to draw retirement benefits and making it possible for newly covered groups to qualify more quickly for benefits. As a result Senator George estimates that half a million additional people would receive benefits in the first year of operation under the Senate plan, thereby reducing the pressure for old-age assistance grants. The House bill, on the other hand, makes only limited changes in present restrictive eligibility requirements.

Despite the shortcomings of both revisionist programs, either one would be a great improvement over the present system. The pressing immediate need is for higher benefits and extended coverage, and we sincerely hope that Congress will not adjourn without enacting legislation that will incorporate the best features of the House and Senate bills. By so doing it will at least lay the foundation for a really effective and comprehensive system of old-age insurance that will in time afford reasonable protection for workers and reduce the numbers of needy retired workers forced to depend on public assistance.

Germany On The Way

We agree with the New York Herald Tribune that the Allied statement on Germany comes as "something of an anticlimax after the imaginative and novel proposal put forward by France." The Schuman proposal isn't mentioned in the pale and anemic communique. Yet one of the reasons for coming to the help of France in Indo-China and so indulging in an adventure the end of which is obscure is to save the Bidault government. This, like most postwar French governments, is shakily situated between extreme Left and extreme Right.

Surely the place to save the French government is in Europe. In seeking to bury the hatchet with Germany, the Bidault government has demonstrated statesmanship of a high order, and, in addition, a spirit of self-abnegation. The Schuman plan thus called at least for the warmth of support that, say, Mr. Bevin gave to Secretary Marshall's speech at Harvard offering the idea of the Marshall Plan. Daring initiatives like this are apt to die on the vine (and the initiating government with it) without American backing. Lukewarmness from this side will encourage powerful groups with a vested interest in the status quo to fight the government, thereby endangering the Bidault ministry.

The Foreign Ministers, however, moved in the right direction in setting up a group to study changes in Germany's occupation statute so as to be ready in September when the time comes for revision. It was well to withhold till then German freedom to establish diplomatic missions. At the same time, the ministers ought to have paved the way to diplomatic liberation, it seems to us, by offering a place on the Council of Europe to High Commissioner McCloy alongside a German member. Instead the Foreign Ministers preferred to make propaganda in behalf of a united Germany. They ought to have borne in mind that, as Mr. Hoffman says, every minute counts, and we have to work with what we have got, with the organization of Europe first business. This newspaper would have liked to see action looking to a sort of federal pact for Europe in place of waiting for conditions to develop favorable to a peace treaty for all Germany.

There is a fixed idea that the Germans' prime preoccupation is the unification of Germany. Walter Lippmann expounds it. He may be right, but it doesn't correspond to our belief. There are other things on the western German mind than unification, such as the Colossus of the East and integration with western Europe. Integration was deep in the German bone long before Bismarck and Hitler apotheosized the Nation-State. It was dominated by Prussia and kept alive by Prussianism. Both are dead, and the normal German, it seems to us, has been thinking second thoughts about a purpose in life beyond the dead-end street of Prusso-German nationalism. Indeed, the Germans actually provided for such a continental grouping in the constitution of the Western German Federal Republic.

Such a metamorphosis from militarism to neighborliness is what the post-Charles XII Swedes went through. Of course, it is simple to create the thing you contemplate, and if policy-makers feel that the Germans are unchanging, and that nothing will satisfy them but the unification of Germany, then we shall have to live and suffer with these assumptions. But this isn't the spirit underlying the Schuman concept—a spirit that goes back beyond the blood and tears of the last thousand years.

Mr. Halley's Job

Selection of Rudolph Halley as chief counsel of the Senate crime investigation is an excellent sign of the intention to do a thorough and nonpolitical job. Mr. Halley served with the Truman War Investigating Committee and later became counsel of its successor, the Mead Committee, and he won praise for his penetrating but factual conduct of investigations. That is the need now—factual staff preparation rather than sensational daily disclosures. Or, as Senator Wiley so well put it, "silent sleuthing" rather than "cops and robbers circuses."

The appointment of the investigation staff coincides with publication of a special issue of the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science dealing with organized gambling. This issue, which is a veritable textbook on the social problems of organized gambling, points out among other things that big-time gambling cannot operate without police or political protection; that it is facilitated by legitimate channels of communication; and that organized gambling has close links with organized crime. These are truisms, but they show the importance of one phase of the committee investigation.

What is needed is dispassionate documentation of the extent of interstate crime and the hold it has on communities. The investigation in itself cannot stop crime, but it can furnish a factual basis for additional legislation if more legislation is needed, and it can help stimulate local communities to clean up their law enforcement. Competent staff work is the key to this job, and it is encouraging that the services of Mr. Halley will be complemented by the even-tempered supervision of Senator Kefauver.

Circus In Chicago

By Marquis Childs

President's Rally

CHICAGO.—This is the city of spectacles. It is where the bread and circuses of latter day big-time politics come into full and fantastic flower.

Some of us remember when President Roosevelt came here during his campaign for reelection in the fall of 1936. Big Ed Kelly was both mayor and boss. He set out to put on the greatest political show the country had ever seen and he just about succeeded.

Roosevelt paraded in the evening to the stadium. The vast crowd overflowed from the curbs into the streets to the dismay of the Secret Service. Around the stadium at least a hundred thousand people were massed in the weird light of great magnesium flares while hundreds of bombs burst in the air overhead as the President arrived.

The deafening roar of the crowd both outside and inside the packed hall startled even that master of crowds, F. D. R. It took all his skill to hold the howling mass into a semblance of an audience to hear his prepared speech.

The current spectacle is of a different order. It is more stage-managed, more contrived, with a "nonpolitical" gloss. The Democrats feel they have put over something pretty clever in this show that has caught national attention.

WHAT MAKES the Republicans in Chicago hopping mad is that most of the cost of this big political rally—for that is what is is—has been taken on by something called the Chicago Host Committee. The committee is made up of Democrats and Republicans who are being asked to contribute up to $150,000 to put on the show.

What makes the Republicans even madder is that the Treasury in Washington has issued a ruling to the effect that contributions to the committee are deductible as business expense from income reported for taxes. That is, they are deductible for those such as hotel and restaurant owners who expect to make a profit from the crowd. For, of course, there is financial as well as political profit in bread and circuses.

The Republicans insist the cost of this spectacle is at least $250,000. The Democrats reply that besides the $100,000 to $150,000 contributed by the host group, the Democratic Committee will not spend more than $50,000.

If the latter is the true cost, then this climax to the President's Western tour is a bargain. It gets out the crowd, it gives them entertainment. The galaxy of Governors here for the series of Democratic conferences serves to advertise the triumphs of the party.

Those who went along on the presidential train, both officials and most reporters, say the trip was successful. By this they mean that large numbers of people turned out who seemed friendly and responsive. What it really signifies, those who remember 1948 and the debacle of the political prophets hesitate to say.

THE GENERAL belief of the men around the President is that the McCarthy business has not hurt Truman himself. Secretary Acheson may have been hurt and it may have harmed certain Democratic members of Congress running for reelection. But in this hopeful view the President has the same symbol value—a homely, unpretentious man who is trying to do his best for all the people.

Granted that this is so—and there is no real way of knowing—the question is whether the President's popularity, his homely, folksy touch, can help Democrats in difficulty in the fall elections. The real purpose of the trip is to get support for the Truman program in the next two years. Anyone who ventures to answer this question with a flat yes or no is simply making a big guess.

The big pageant is all about Thomas Jefferson. Someone thought up the idea of observing the 150th anniversary of Jefferson's first campaign for the Presidency.

Boy, oh boy, how surprised Jefferson would be if he could see Chicago and the way Presidents campaign in the middle of the twentieth century. The kind of democracy Jefferson conceived was a democracy of freeholders, each man digging in his own soil and rearing his sons and daughters in sturdy independence. Jefferson feared the rise of large cities and the growth of urban masses with no roots in the American system or the American earth. I've often wondered what he would say about today's "civilization" in which the closest claim that millions have to any physical part in it is a small down payment on a washing machine or an automobile.

Lie Detector Check

Drew Pearson suggests Senator McCarthy may try to crawl out of his whole smear campaign by demanding lie-detector tests for all who disagree with him, knowing that this is out of the Senate committee's line.

Why should this be out of the committee's line? Why cannot the committee arrange for the FBI to give such tests, and invite all key witnesses to take them, provided McCarthy himself leads the way by agreeing to repeat all his charges while hooked up to the detector, with the results to be made public? Why, in short, does not the committee carry the offensive to McCarthy for a change, instead of leaving him the initiative?

CURIOUS.

Statehood Drawbacks

The question of admission of Alaska and Hawaii to Statehood is an important one, and by no means as one-sided as might be inferred from some affirmative editorials on the subject that I have read. Several reasons for admission have been urged:

1. That the admission of these Territories is necessary to the defense of the United States. In reply, it should be sufficient to refer to the recent statement of Rear Admiral Wood, retired, before a Senate committee, that the admission of Alaska "would not alter . . . the over-all consideration of our defense problems." I will go further and say that either Alaska or Hawaii can be more effectively defended without the intervention of a State government.

2. That the population of Alaska, 135,000, is greater than that of some States when admitted. Perhaps so; but we are dealing with modern conditions, not ancient history. The entire population of Alaska, whites, Indians and Eskimos, most of them of low taxable status, is scarcely enough for one modern city of fair size. Yet it is proposed to top this with an expensive State government.

3. That because of territorial status Alaska has been denied help to expand and develop its natural resources. Our tax money has already been poured out in various ways for Alaska. One of our greatest problems is the demand for Federal help for local needs. We all know of the perennial rivers and harbors bills. Two more Senators and a Representative to make demands.

4. That Alaska and Hawaii have a right to representation in Congress. Both have profited immeasurably by their connection with the United States. Both have self-government sufficient for their needs. Both have nonvoting representation before Congress. But voting representation is bound up with Statehood, and that brings us to the most vital feature of the case.

If one of the three, Alaska, Hawaii and Puerto Rico, is admitted to Statehood, then all will be. It will be merely a question of time. These will send to the Congress six Senators and three or more Representatives, not merely to represent them, but also to help govern us.

While the framers of the Constitution did provide for admission of new States, their eyes were on that contiguous and readily assimilable territory that is now a part of our Union of States. Never for a moment did they contemplate admission to Statehood of distant peoples with alien background, to help govern them.

Admission to Statehood is not a right of any of these Territories. We have used them well. We will use them well. We will defend them. But we should not place our future in their hands.

FEPC Stand

Your May 9 editorial, "FEPC: Plea for Reason," does not exhibit very careful reasoning itself. We agree wholeheartedly "that the country cannot stand a prolonged filibuster" but is the answer abject surrender to the Southern filibusterers? Your proposal to enact a "voluntary" FEPC bill amounts to just that. Does The Washington Post believe that such a gesture would affect the discrimination which the bill hopes to cure? I ask you to read your own editorials from 1943 to 1948 when your paper joined us in the crusade against bigotry.

Does The Post believe that the passage of a voluntary bill would promote national unity in the present tense world situation? Patent sham has never produced national unity.

The filibuster can be broken if the Nation's press would expose it for what it is: a totalitarian device against our democracy.

Religious Votes

Mr. T. F. McCarthy's May 6 letter on the Spanish loan vote seems to suggest that Catholic Senators are expected to cast their votes because of their religious faith.

Some years ago this suggestion was made to a Roman Catholic statesman in Canada, Sir Wilfred Laurier. In a historic speech made in the Canadian House of Commons in 1896, Mr. Laurier rejected this suggestion.

I quote from his closing remarks. "So long as I have a seat in this House, whenever it shall become my duty to take a stand upon any question, I will take that stand, not from the point of view of my Roman Catholicism, not from the point of view of Protestantism, but from a point of view which can appeal to the consciences of all men, irrespective of their particular faith. Upon grounds that can be occupied by all men who love justice, freedom and toleration."

I suggest that McCarthy and the Senators he mentions read the entire speech of Mr. Laurier.

"Who Lost China?"

It was with great interest that I read the May 11 letter from Mr. Timothy Mar. I wish to challenge Mr. Mar and all the Republican Congressmen who have stood stanchly by the regime of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, on the topic of who actually lost China.

Are they really familiar with the internal situation of Chiang's regime in Formosa which has allegedly reported that it has been under drastic reform for soliciting aid from this country? If not, here is some iron-clad evidence: Just recently, disregarding previous cases involving millions of dollars in graft through the same methods, a case occurred wherein that same regime was pocketing with one hand approximately $100,000 from the purchase of aviation gasoline amounting only to three million gallons through a Chinese grocery man in San Francisco, and yet, the other hand was holding a tin cup begging for immediate aid of 50 million dollars from the United States Government! If they have no knowledge of these facts, then, they are isolated from those in the Chinese and American circles in Washington who are "in the know."

No one will ever be convinced that any constructive suggestions to the reading public will do any good for such a rotten regime conducting destructive action by themselves. Who can save the ship if the people aboard want to scuttle it? Let bygones be bygones; but the case mentioned herein is definitely not old enough to be a ghost. It is just a baby, not older than three months, who was born in Taipei, Formosa. Here is another question: Can they blame this case on a Communist plot against the government?

MARY JOHNSON.

"Wrong Economy"

Your editorial of May 12 on "Wrong Economy" fully covered the general fallacies of the Taber-Thomas and Jensen amendments from the standpoint of the economy objective, and Jerry Kluttz aptly pointed out the day before that these amendments if enacted "would go down in history as "Black Wednesday" for Federal workers."

A reading of the Congressional Record leads me to the conclusion that what is sought by the proponents is (1) to deal a concealed blow to Federal employes with false assurances in an effort to hold their vote nevertheless, and (2) to give citizenry the impression that something is being done for economy even though the usual pork-barrels were not touched—that is, a preelection impression of economy with deficiency appropriations after election to repair damage.

The Congressional Record indicates that the cuts may have to be restored later in the fiscal year (after election), so that the claim of a saving is therefore false. Not having been able to provide that cut through the normal budget adjustments, members of Congress show by their statements that there is no confidence that the cut would outlast the end of the fiscal year. Is the citizen so easily deluded? I doubt it. All Congresses could have presented very big preelection cuts and restored them after election through deficiency appropriations.

This now-you-see-it-now-you-don't "economy" amendment in the interim would create so much administrative havoc that it would impair effectiveness of Government so that the citizen would not obtain enough for the money to be spent.

Contrary to the claim that Federal employes have nothing to fear, the jeopardy would be made unusually harsh for anyone who might be involved in reduction-in-force. With other agencies largely barred from filling vacancies from outside the agency, the situation for anyone who might be involved in such reduction, would be far worse than heretofore. It would place Federal employes under a greater hazard by greatly intensifying the damaging effect of a reduction dismissal.

In using turnover to absorb changes of budget the amendments would not introduce anything new. The agencies have always used internal transfers and attritions to the extent that it was possible, with the excess subject to reduction dismissal. But, at least the agencies with vacancies were not barred from considering these people. Therein is the real "something new" which the Federal employes are to be told would be harmless and "painless."

Reading the Congressional Record on these amendments gives the impression that the frauds and delusions might be fairly unconscious on the part of the proponents. (It is entirely possible that a House comprised of 435 members is too unwieldy for efficiency in the legislative branch.) The Federal employe would probably find out the truth before election, although the citizenry would have to wait until after election to find out the truth about the "economy" part.

A "meat ax" cut is the kind that has to be restored later in the year because the expenditure to be cut or eliminated are not identified. That is what is discernable from the Congressional Record.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Diplomatic Revolution

FOR THE meaning of the London discussions about Germany we take you now, as the radio announcers say, to Germany. For the day is past when the foreign ministers of the occupying powers could meet, could discuss Germany with no Germans present, and could then lay down the law for Germany. The communique from London still uses some of the language of the past. But this is a formality. The communique announced no new decisions, but not because new decisions are not in the making. New decisions are in the making. But they can no longer be made except after negotiation with the Germans.

Lippmann

For that reason Dr. Adenauer felt able to treat the communique as a mere preliminary to negotiations with his government, and to announce confidently that he expected "rapid and great concessions" which would give Germany "complete freedom of action."

DR. ADENAUER'S confidence, his ability to speak in this way, represents his estimate of the allied position in Germany. It would seem to be a reasonably accurate estimate. Although the three foreign ministers said in their communique that "in the present situation of Europe the supreme authority must remain in the hands of the allied powers," Dr. Adenauer is acting on the assumption that the Allies can no longer exercise supreme authority without consulting him and indeed without his consent.

The position is one, as Dr. Adenauer knows only too well, where the Western allies can retain the "supreme authority" only if they do not exercise it against the will of the German government. They must avoid any downright test of their authority. They can issue no orders unless they know the orders will be obeyed. For if the German government decided to disobey an order, the Western powers would not face the consequences of enforcing it, even if they had the power to enforce it.

All this is the natural and logical consequence of the allied decision in 1948 to establish a west German government.

THE FRENCH who were the last to agree, and then most reluctantly, have been the first to recognize the results. In 1948 they opposed—and had to be overridden—the London agreements for the establishment of a German government because they knew this meant the liquidation of allied control and the revival of the political power of Germany. The British and Americans shook their heads about the poor neurotic French and their obsession about Germany. But as a matter of fact the poor neurotic French with their obsession about Germany had seen with icy clarity where the London agreements would lead. In 1950 they have seen so clearly where they led that they have decided that France must be the ally and partner of a revived and independent Germany.

The French have never had the illusion, which has distorted so much British and American thinking, that a free Germany could or would be a useful and reliable auxiliary of the English-speaking nations. The French have realized always that Germany, despite her defeat, is not only the strongest continental nation but also that in European affairs, Germany, as she recovers from the war, is a greater power than Britain. It follows that the vital interests of French security require not merely assurance that Germany will not again attack France but something far bigger than that—an assurance that in the coming settlement of Europe German and French policy shall run in partnership.

THE ALLIED communique recognizes that the "peaceful reunification of Germany" is the "ultimate object of their policy." It is clearly the ultimate and the paramount object of German policy. Now the peaceful reunification of Germany can be achieved only by diplomacy, and as a matter of fact and in the last analysis only by diplomatic arrangements in which the West Germans, the East Germans and the Russians are all of them principals.

The greatest danger to the free world has been that western Germany, having recovered its freedom and with its power and influence restored, would turn to the East and achieve the reunification of Germany at the expense of the West. The French offer to Germany is the best and indeed the only constructive alternative. The French have, so to speak, proposed to reverse Rapallo—that is to say, to give the Germans a true Western alliance as a basis for their negotiations with the East. If the policy is realized, the French would go with the Germans into the settlement which ends the partition of Germany and its corollary and consequence, the division of Europe.

THE NEGOTIATING power of this French-German partnership, especially if it has—as it will—the support of virtually all of the Atlantic community, will be very great indeed. It should permit Mr. Acheson to take the view that the leadership in a European settlement can then be primarily and predominantly not Anglo-American — and therefore non-European—but Franco-German and therefore truly European.

Need for U. S. Aid to Asia Is Broached

Sydney, Australia, May 15 (AP).—A British Commonwealth conference today indicated it would appeal directly to the United States to give speedy economic aid to all southeast Asia, now fighting off a threat of Communist expansion.

Only one delegate—the representative of Pakistan—expressed this outright, but the other delegates either said or implied that British Commonwealth resources alone would not be sufficient for speedy and effective economic aid to the area and that support for southeast Asia must be sought outside the Commonwealth, too.

This was the main theme of today's opening session of a meeting which is called officially "the British Commonwealth Consultative Committee Conference." It is being attended by 70 delegates from Australia, Britain, Canada, New Zealand, India, Pakistan and the conference last January of the Commonwealth foreign ministers in Ceylon.

The Pakistani delegate, Industry Minister Ghaudhry Nazir Ahmed Khan, told the other delegates: "We earnestly seek the cooperation and assistance of countries outside the Commonwealth, especially of the United States."

McCarthy Blasts State Dept. China Policy as Betraying Asia

tacking Budenz as a bigamist, conspirator, liar and headline-hunting hypocrite.

Chavez indicated to reporters that he will not back down despite criticisms of his position by the Very Rev. Laurence J. McGinley, president of Fordham University. Budenz is an economics professor at Fordham.

"I am not getting into any argument with the Rev. McGinley of Fordham," Chavez said. "I happen to be a descendant of the same race of persons as the one who started the Jesuit order, so I can and do respect the cloth.

"Nevertheless, in conscience, I think I have done the faith a service. I dislike the Communists and I dislike the Ku Klux Klan, and for that reason I want the people of my faith as Americans to behave so that neither Communists, Ku Kluxers nor cross burners can exist.

On Saturday, McGinley said that Budenz is a "Christian gentleman" who is performing his duty by exposing Communists. He said Chavez's speech was worse than attacks on Budenz that have been printed in the Communist press.

McGinley's defense of Budenz was complete and all-out, and his assault on Chavez was the same. The Fordham president said:

"During his years at Fordham Professor Budenz—both as a teacher and as a Christian gentleman—has deserved and continues to enjoy the full confidence of the university . . .

"Under Government subpena, Professor Budenz has appeared as a witness in many trials over the last five years. He has, as was to be expected, when he testified against Communists or Communist activities, been castigated both here and abroad by those whose conspiracy he was called upon to expose.

"Never to my knowledge, have responsible officials of our own Government or members of the American press had other than praise for his conscientiousness as a witness . . .

"Whatever mistakes Professor Budenz has made in the past are an open book. Unfortunately for him, he has had to live under the constant threat of Communist reprisals, and to bear in silence the sneers of modern Pharisees who are always ready to point a self-righteous finger at their fellow man.

"The Catholic Church, convinced of the sincerity of his repentance, welcomed Louis Budenz back into the fold. Let those, who, in the name of the church of charity, presume to shout another man's alleged transgressions from the housetops, look instead into their own hearts."

Sees Conspiracy

The burden of McCarthy's speech was an argument that a conspiracy existed in high places in the American Government. Its purpose, he alleged, was to deliver China into the hands of Stalin and help him make the Pacific into a "Red lake."

The present task, he went on, is to destroy the last remnants of Chiang Kai-shek's armies, 500,000 men now on Formosa. This is the Communists' number one goal and, "incidentally, as you know, this is the number one plank in the written platform of the State Department adviser; its architect of our Far Eastern policy, Owen Lattimore."

The Johns Hopkins University professor has vigorously denied being the "architect" of American Far Eastern policy; in fact, he complained he has been the least listened-to of any person with expert knowledge of that area. Acheson and the three living former Secretaries of State have also denied that he was in any way the shaper of American policy.

McCarthy, however, said that Lattimore advised letting Formosa fall to the Reds, and letting South Korea also go to the Reds, but in the interim spending some money there so it will not appear that the United States pushed its downfall.

This, in effect, is just what the State Department is doing, McCarthy said.

"Look Like Suicide"

The design of the plan, he said, is to commit "murder, but make it look like suicide."

The Senator reverted again to his charge that Jessup, when connected with the Institute of Pacific Relations, countenanced donations is that the organization from Frederick W. Field, so-called millionaire Communist in New York.

Previously, McCarthy said the amount was $3500 over two years. Yesterday, he said he had photostats to show that the total was $6500 from Field.

The IPR had, during the two years in which the $3500 was contributed by Field, a total budget of $200,000, of which about half was given by the Carnegie and Rockefeller Foundations and most of the rest by large industrial concerns.

Concluding, McCarthy declared that President Truman should return from his "whistle-stop" tour and tell Jessup there was no place in the Government for men "whose organization takes money from Communists."

Appeal to Mothers

But first, said McCarthy, Mr. Truman should "look into the faces of the mothers standing by your train tonight. Are they to weep again for their sons who must fight and die for the failures of dishonest or incompetent men? Are their sons next when the Red hordes trample over the bodies of 500,000 Chinese dead who perished for lack of arms? . . .

"Come home, Mr. Truman, and halt Mr. Acheson's veto of everything America stands for.

"Come home, Mr. Truman, and tell the Lattimore-Acheson Axis to give effective aid to the anti-Communists in Asia. Order them to supply the rear guard on Formosa with the sinews those fighting men need.

"Come home, Mr. Truman, and fire the Pied Pipers of the Politburo. Fire the headmaster who betrays us in Asia. Fire the collectors of corruption, those prancing mimics of the Moscow Party line in the State Department."

High Court Agrees to Consider 2d Attack on Loyalty Program

The Supreme Court yesterday agreed to consider a second attack on the President's loyalty program.

The case is that of the National Council of American - Soviet Friendship. Like the case involving the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, accepted by the Court in March, it challenges in general the loyalty program's constitutionality and specifically the Attorney General's subversive list. Both groups are on that list.

The two cases will not be argued until next fall, with a decision unlikely for some months after that.

A third, involving the dismissal of Dorothy Bailey from a Government job after a loyalty investigation, is still on the court's docket for consideration. The court has yet to announce whether it will take the case. The loyalty program was sustained by the lower courts in all three instances.

The high court yesterday also agreed to consider an allied case, involving three persons sentenced to jail for contempt of court in Denver after they refused to answer grand jury questions about Communist activities. The three are Jane Rogers, former Denver Communist Party treasurer; Irving Blau and his wife, Patricia.

Mrs. Rogers refused to say to whom she had turned over the party's books when she gave up the treasurer's job. Blau refused to answer questions on his alleged connections with the Communist Party and his wife refused to describe party records. He was asked if he was a Communist but she was not.

All three contended the Constitution gives citizens "the right of privacy and silence against any effort to compel disclosure of political associations and beliefs."

This plea of refusal to answer on grounds of self-incrimination is based on the Fifth Amendment's provision that no person "shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself."

The jail sentences, ranging from four months to a year, were upheld by the Circuit Court of Appeals in Denver last January. But in a similar case, another circuit court of appeals (in San Francisco) announced a conflicting decision. The Supreme Court presumably would resolve that conflict and clarify rights under the self-incrimination plea.

Justice Clark, former Attorney General, took no part in the Denver or Council of American-Soviet Friendship actions yesterday. It was Clark who put the two organizations on the subversive list.

1950 Bond Drive Launched

Philadelphia, May 15 (AP).—With the historic Liberty Bell as a symbol and historic Philadelphia the site, the United States today opened the 1950 Independence Drive to sell savings bonds to America's millions.

Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder tapped the huge, cracked bell, now enshrined in Independence Hall, to start the campaign to sell at least $653,950,000 in "E" bonds.

It was this bell that rang out when America's original 13 colonies declared independence in 1776.

Snyder said that during the drive, which ends on July 4, "the people of America will be urged to consider anew the idea of independence, particularly financial independence."

The Secretary told a luncheon gathering of bankers and businessmen that the world's hope for peace "depends in large measure upon the economic, military and spiritual strength of our Nation."

At Independence Hall, Snyder hailed the Independence Drive as one "designed to encourage thrift, promote citizenship, and awaken greater public interest in the fiscal affairs of the Nation."

After Snyder tapped the historic bell he tolled out what he called "the sound of independence" on a Liberty Bell replica. Thirteen descendants of signers of the Declaration of Independence from the 13 original colonies attended.

Then on Independence Square—the spacious grounds that surround the hall—some 125 actors recreated the memorable days of American history when the independence document was written and signed.

Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, John Quincy Adams, John Hancock, Benjamin Rush lived again in the costumed pageant "Spectacle of Independence."

The child was shot in the stomach by her 4-year-old brother, Richard, last Friday in an accident at their home, 1003 Westmoreland rd., Falls Church. The child's physician said there was little change in her condition yesterday.

Reds Seclude Army In Eastern Germany

By Tom Reedy

Dessau, Soviet Zone of Germany, May 15 (AP).—The Russian Army in Germany has gone into seclusion.

Soviet soldiers seldom are seen on the streets of East Berlin or East Zone cities.

Western correspondents, allowed to travel 100 miles from Berlin to Dessau for an East German "treason" trial, were struck by this.

In three days in Dessau, a city of 90,000, I saw only two Russian enlisted men on the street, and five officers in one big, ration-free restaurant.

The Red Army has been pulled back from the population areas into barracks life. It still is here . . . Allied authorities say 250,000 strong.

Purposes Accomplished

Allied and German authorities reason the Soviets accomplish two purposes by this:

1. The East German Communist government is given the facade of being the only government in existence for the 18 million Soviet Zone Germans.

2. The Russian soldier is kept away from the explosive combination of too much vodka in him and too much beer in a resentful German.

The barracks life apparently was intensified last Fall when the East German "Democratic Republic" was formed with the Kremlin's blessing.

Since then, wooden signs in Russian have cropped up in East Zone cities. They are directional signs to the barracks outside the populated areas. Other traffic signs are in German only. The old dual language posters are disappearing.

Helps Propaganda

Eastern propaganda seizes on this situation to emphasize in the Soviet Zone press every time an American soldier gets into some street fight or other trouble in the West. These stories are played in big type, always hammering on the "go home" theme for western occupation troops.

Except for a few road junctions, the Russians have turned over to the East German "peoples police" most controls on traffic. Trains are checked by the Volkspolizei against contraband or illicit travel.

The disappearance of the Russian hasn't removed uniforms from the streets. Peoples' police are in abundance. It's hard to say how many there are, but Western officials estimate a hard core of 50,000 para-military police being trained as an army. This does not include the ordinary man on the beat.

Thousands of young men, ranging in age from 16 to 20, are being trained as police recruits.

One center, outside Dessau, has a complement of 5000 recruits. They get periodic leaves to come into the city and spend their money in the ration-free restaurant for food and drink. They stick together and do not mingle with civilians.

The police are disciplined and seem to mind their own business. On the streets, some of them stared wonderingly when they heard a few words of English being spoken.

An American passport makes them blink. One officer at the Dessau court asked for personal credentials before permitting entrance. He slowly leafed through the green passport, unable to read the English words, and then handed it back with a smile:

"That's a good picture of you," he said in German.

Court Gets Lesson In Economics, Suspends $5 Fine

Minneapolis, May 15 (U.P.)—A 21-year-old student from Denmark gave a Traffic Court judge a lesson in economics and saved himself a $5 parking fine.

Torkil Holm, who came here to study at the University of Minnesota, pleaded he was too poor to pay the fine.

Judge Paul Jaroscak said he didn't see how a man who could afford to drive a car could be that poor.

"You be seated and figure that one out," he ordered.

A half-hour later Holm was back, explaining he drove his $15 auto eight miles a day. Getting 16 miles to the gallon, he figured the daily cost was 11 cents. He said it would cost 24 cents to ride the streetcar the same way.

"How about depreciation?" asked the judge.

"How can you depreciate a $15 car?" Holm countered.

500 in D. C. Area to Compete Here Today in Science Fair

More than 500 boys and girls from Washington and three Maryland counties will place exhibits in competition in the fourth annual District of Columbia Science Fair today at the Department of Commerce Auditorium.

Twenty-four awards for winners will be presented at a ceremony at 8 p. m. today by Keith C. Johnson, head of the public schools department of science, Divisions 1 to 9.

There will be first, second and third awards to junior and senior grade winners in each of four classifications. These are biological, physical, engineering and physiographical sciences.

Top awards to two boys and two girls in the senior division will be all-expense trips to Philadelphia where they will represent the District area at the first National Science Fair, May 19 to 21.

Representatives of schools in Prince Georges, Montgomery, and Anne Arundel Counties in Maryland will participate in the Washington Fair. About 50 to 60 representatives of the Prince Georges schools, selected Friday night at a science fair from among 260 contestants at Laurel High School, will be among the competitors here.

Biggest Air Exodus

Baghdad, Iraq, May 15 (U.P.)—More than 50,000 Jews will be flown from Iraq to Israel soon in the biggest air migration in history under an agreement announced here today, as a result of nationality renunciation laws, which virtually force Jews to leave the country.

Too Many Bright Ones

Tucson, Ariz., May 15 (AP).—The University of Arizona senior honors assembly, held annually for more than a quarter of a century, will be abolished this year. It would take too long to pass out the awards to the approximately 250 who are graduating with honors.

Rescue Squad Ends Jam Session With Snappy Juke Box

Toledo, Ohio, May 15 (AP).—The fire department rescue squad had to end Bernard Van Dette's jam session with a juke box.

Van Dette, 28, a painter, was alone in a bar where he was doing some redecorating when he dropped a nickel in the nickelodeon to liven his work.

The music box stopped running, so Van Dette reached into the mechanism to release the record selector. But the record holder clamped onto his hand, pinning it tightly.

Dragging the 200-pound instrument 10 feet across the floor, Van Dette reached a telephone to summon the rescue squad. He was unable to reach the door when firemen arrived, however, so rescuers broke a front window.

His only injury was bruised fingers.

Life Insurance Firms Aid in Heart Study

Life insurance companies of the United States and Canada will give $670,000 to medical schools and research centers this year in the fight on heart disease, it has been announced.

The awards were approved last week at the annual meeting of the Life Insurance Medical Research Fund.

Included in the awards approved by the fund's board of directors are grants-in-aid for research programs totaling $548,000. An additional $122,000 will go toward financing 34 research fellows.

The list of recipients of post-graduate research fellowships, with stipends varying from $3000 to $4000, includes the name of Dr. Edward W. Hawthorn, of Washington, for research at the University of Illinois College of Medicine.

The grants bring to $3,200,000 the total amount of money distributed by the fund since it was organized in 1945.

Stray Dog Leads Boy To His Death in Ditch

Durango, Colo, May 15 (AP).—A stray dog led 2½-year-old Gerry Simmons to death.

Fire Chief Lewis Fanslan said the youngster followed the dog down the bank of a deep irrigation canal, fell in the water and drowned. The ditch runs by the yard of a store operated by the boy's mother, Mrs. Matt Simmons.

Thoughtful Citizen Aids Census-Taker

Altus, Okla., May 15 (AP).—You can't beat the civic mindedness of one Altus citizen.

He asked and received permission to delay his trip until he could be counted for the census.

Strike-Bound Utility Taken Over by N. J.

Newark, N. J., May 15 (AP).—The strikebound Public Service Electric & Gas Co. was seized by the State of New Jersey today to prevent continued curtailment of services.

Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll ordered the big utility taken over after street lights had been blacked out in 13 communities and a number of homes were left without electric service.

Walter T. Margetts, chairman of the State Mediation Board, was appointed administrator of the seized properties.

He took over official custody of Public Service shortly after noon and ordered 4400 striking maintenance workers back to their jobs.

Margetts said he had obtained assurances from strike leaders that all union men would return as soon as possible.

The strike, involving members of the AFL International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, began last Wednesday in a dispute over wages. The company offered a 2 percent pay increase. The union demands 5 percent.

Lumber Workers Quit At Weyerhaeuser Plants

Portland, Oreg., May 15 (AP).—About 8000 CIO lumber workers struck today against the huge Weyerhaeuser Lumber Co., but the rest of the Northwest lumber industry continued operations.

Weyerhaeuser was the only major lumber operation not to have reached a settlement with the CIO International Woodworkers of America when the union's strike deadline arrived this morning.

The other big employer groups agreed late last week to grant the union demand of a health and welfare program financed by employer contributions of 7½ cents per man-hour. Three paid holidays—a compromise—were also agreed upon.

1000 Strike for Pay Hike At Pullman Plant

Michigan City Ind., May 15 (AP).—The 1000 workers at the Pullman Standard Car Manufacturing Co., here struck today in a dispute over wages. Pickets paraded before the plant entrance.

The workers are members of the AFL Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, Local 290. Their contract with the Pullman Company expired June 29, 1949.

The union is asking wage increases and equalization of wages, a pension and insurance plan, and a union shop. The union shop was won in an NLRB election last year.

Rail Strikers Begin Applying For Jobless Compensation

tion's rail passengers and more than a fifth of the rail freight.

The New York Central, another of the five struck lines, has not increased its emergency operations, in effect since the strike started. These include two freight, two mail and three passenger trains in and out of Chicago daily from the east. The NYC canceled 125 passenger and 300 daily freight trains when the strike started.

The union is demanding an extra fireman on multiple-unit diesel locomotives and employment of a fireman on small switch diesels. The walkout has made some 200,000 workers idle in railroading, coal mining and a few industries.

Among the latest companies hit was the Fretz Moon Tube Co. of Butler, Pa. The steel fabricating plant furloughed its 250 workers because of lack of steel shipments.

The union, meanwhile, refused to supply firemen on 14 divisions of the Southern Railway's 27-division system. L. B. Johnson, Southern general chairman for the union, said trainmen in seven new divisions have been called out since Friday.

Both strikers and rail workers made idle by the strike have filed applications for unemployment compensation with the Railroad Retirement Board.

Under the law, these benefits range from $1.75 to $5 a day, depending on a worker's earnings. A striker can collect seven days of benefits during the first two weeks of any legal strike and then 10 days benefits for each subsequent two-week period, up to a maximum of 130 days.

Such payments are made to strikers if it is determined the strike was conducted in compliance with the Railway Labor Act. No such determination is required for nonstrikers made idle by a work stoppage.

fore pronounced they possess."

In bringing the cases to the high court last fall, the Government charged the Circuit Court with setting up a "pattern of denial" of enforcement orders. Solicitor General Philip Perlman cited figures to show that the NLRB had a tougher time in the Fifth Circuit than anywhere else in obtaining the necessary court orders. The circuit comprises Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana and Texas.

Involved were the Mexia Textile Mills, Inc., of Mexia, Tex., and the Pool Manufacturing Co. of Sherman, Tex., the CIO's Textile Workers Union of America and the AFL's United Garment Workers of America.

Other Actions by Court

In other actions yesterday the Supreme Court:

1. Refused to review the contempt of Congress conviction of Joseph P. Kamp of New York. He was convicted after refusing, in 1944, to show financial records of the Constitutional Educational League to the House Campaign Expenditures Committee. Kamp was fined $100 and sentenced to four months in jail.

2. Affirmed the ruling of a special three-judge Federal District Court, which had thrown out a complaint alleging that New York State laws permitting wire tapping are unconstitutional. The New York County Criminal Courts Bar Association and its president, Herman Hoffman, also had attacked the laws as violating the Federal Communications Act. But the special court rejected the complaint on the grounds they failed to present an actual controversy, such as a loss of civil rights, on which the court had jurisdiction to act. Wiretapping is legal in the State if law enforcement officers first obtain approval from a judge in one of certain specified courts.

Permits for Religious Meetings

3. Agreed to consider a New York City law forbidding religious meetings in public places without a permit. A permit to speak was denied Carl J. Kunz after complaints of previous speeches in which he attacked both Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths.

4. Agreed to decide whether two associates of prohibition gangster Al Capone had their paroles withdrawn unfairly. They are Louis Compagna and Charles Gioe, now serving time for conspiracy to extort money from movie producers.

5. Refused to reconsider its decision of April 17 upholding the Georgia county unit election system.

6. Ruled 8 to 1 that companies that are given financial inducements to set up factories in certain communities are entitled to Federal tax benefits. Justice Clark delivered the majority opinion with Justice Black alone dissenting. The case involved the Brown Shoe Co., Inc., of St. Louis, which claimed certain tax benefits for the $971,031 it said it received in cash and property in Illinois, Indiana, Tennessee and Missouri communities. The court held that such inducements were contributions to capital.

The court recessed after yesterday's session until May 29 and announced its hope of ending the 1949-50 term on June 5. However, since about 20 opinions remain to be handed down, including the important tidelands and segregation cases, it may take an additional week or so to round out the term.

the milk supply into three classes —fluid milk, cream and other dairy products — with a separate price for each class. The milk producers are paid according to the use to which their milk is put by the dairies.

Association Ruled Co-op

Judge Holtzoff ruled the Association was a cooperative, and as such can fix prices without violating the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

"But that immunity lasts only until it (the Association) crosses the line and enters into agreements with others, not farmers", he said.

Under certain conditions cooperatives could go even that far without violating the anti-trust laws, Judge Holtzoff said, but only when these agreements were "placed under the supervision of the Government, with the Secretary of Agriculture a party to all agreements."

"Such is not the case here", he said.

"Bad Faith" Held Lacking

Judge Holtzoff stressed that "there is no evidence that any of the dairies acted in bad faith with malevolent motive or evil design."

"There is no evidence that the prices fixed were unreasonable, no evidence of misuse of power, but the laws are directed against the existence of that power.

"There is an honest difference of opinion whether the conduct is permitted by law," he continued.

Tells How to Get "Overnight" Relief From Bunion Foot

According to a Chicago foot authority, you may suffer needlessly from racking bunion pains—from the sore, enlarged bunion bump which swells at the side of the big toe.

The head of a company that has studied foot aches for over 50 years, and produced millions of treatments for foot ailments, reports they have developed a simple method from which the sufferer feels relief from pain almost at once. But that isn't all!

FAIRYFOOT—this new-day bunion method not only alleviates pain but, he claims, you may watch the large and swollen bunion go down, get smaller and smaller and soon you may wear regular shoes again. To acquaint readers of this paper with actual proof, FAIRYFOOT offers a free sample and full details to anyone who requests it—without cost or obligation. The address is: Dept. 195, FAIRYFOOT, 1223 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago 5, Illinois. A penny postcard will do—but write today.

Light, Food in U. S. Unfit for Artist, Painter Dali Says

Paris, May 15 (U.P.)—Salvador Dali, the surrealist painter, said today the United States is no country for an artist.

"The light in America is no good, neither is the food," he explained here on his way to his native Spain for a period of "monklike" seclusion.

"The light in New York, and as a matter of fact all over America, is much too harsh," Dali said. "No artist can overcome it."

The food? "It's barbaric," Dali said. "No nation with barbaric food can produce great paintings. In America they haven't the aesthetic touch. They just pour on the salt and pour on the tomato catsup."

Dali said he would paint nothing but religious pictures from now on.

"YOU HARDLY KNOW THE ROAD IS THERE!"

You won't be the first to say that—not by a long shot.

One of the first things you notice, when you step from another make of car into Buick, is the wonderful difference in the Buick ride.

There are good technical reasons, if they interest you...

Soft coil springs all around, the gentlest type of spring man knows how to make.

A stout torque-tube, acting like the husky keel of a battleship to steady the whole carriage.

Low-pressure tires on wide, Safety-Ride rims, that stop heel-over and sway on curves.

Firm, sure, quick-acting shock absorbers, promptly snubbing the after-bounce of the bigger bumps.

The important thing is what these all add up to.

Freedom at last from jounce and jiggle. A level, floating, road-free passage over almost any kind of road, with even the worst of them tamed and gentled as never before.

Add Fireball power to all this—the roominess of wide, deep seats—the lightness of Buick controls and the liquid silkiness of Dynaflow Drive*—and you have a car just too good to miss.

Come try one, won't you? Your Buick dealer will be delighted to demonstrate without obligation—delighted to show you that if you can afford a new car, you probably can afford a Buick.

Let's Have More Of Molly Picon

By Richard L. Coe

MEETING MOLLY: A certain test of the true artist is the language barrier. If, while an artist is performing in a tongue you don't know, you are moved in understanding and emotion, you can be pretty sure you're in the presence of the exceptional.

Belatedly, on Sunday night Molly Picon gave me that experience during her bilingual one-woman show at the Jewish Community Center. I'm genuinely sorry you who are reading this couldn't have shared that experience with me, for this expressive woman is surely one of the greats of the American theater.

To some of you this probably comes as no news at all, for I'm shamefully late in catching up with Molly. She won't mind my admitting I've heard of her since I was a boy and Molly was headlining at the Palace, but somehow I never caught her and, in a sense, I'm glad to find it's still possible to discover, when one is in the constant danger of being bored beyond belief, a talent so wondrously moving.

Born in Philadelphia, she went on the Yiddish stage at the age of five. She has largely remained in the theater of her faith, but has done enough non-Yiddish performing on Broadway, in vaudeville, in the clubs, on the air and around the globe to have an exceptional reputation everywhere. It's her general custom to star in two plays each season at New York's Second Avenue theater, covered, by the way, by the first string Broadway critics.

Though she appears to have masses of an all-English tongue repertoirs, Sunday evening she split her program to also include purely Yiddish songs, humorous and straight. When she tells you of a Yiddish mama's large family, you feel you've met each one. When she suggests a sleeping man in a theater, you've seen him. When she makes with the gestures peculiar to her race, you know precisely what she means.

How? That's the secret of years of work, but the outward manifestations are a superb use of voice, face and hands. She does a song (from her vaudeville rep) about "Grandma's Shawl" and shows you grandma at all the stages of her life; you laugh at her newrich orders to a butler and you have a catch in your throat at the old lady with the puckered face who's not allowed to sing a lullaby to her grandchild. She runs the gamut of years with her voice and what Hildegarde could learn from watching those wonderful hands!

No One Like Her

I know of no performer now appearing who can do what this artist manages. Ruth Draper and Cornelia Otis Skinner approximate her in the spoken word and though her voice is nothing to startle the Met's Bing, she has mastered its limitations completely. She closest, I guess, to the late Yvette Guilbert.

One more personal sidelight: to these frankly anti-Zionist ears, her song about the new Israel set them thrilling.

Meeting her later, I found little of the onstage glamour. She's immesly simple, likes to talk about her country home, its flowers and antiques. For 19 years she and her husband, Producer Jacob Kalich have had a man-wife program in Yiddish on a New York station, surely a real record. I liked her story about appearing a few years ago in a DP camp outside Warsaw. It was raining and her Polish accompanist's music was wet beyond reading. She told the audience she'd probably have to stop. Up stood a five-year-old lad in the front row. "There is no rain," he declared. "Sing."

Molly's not much in favor of vaudeville any more: "Four and five shows a day, 10 minutes a piece, it's not worth it." Still, Manager Margolis couldn't have a better Capitol headliner.

YOUTH IN THE RUINS: Montgomery Clift and Cornell Borchers, a Yank and his Berlin girl friend, in "The Big Lift," the Palace picture about Operation Vittles

MOLLY'S ACCOMPANIST is a pretty unusual fellow, too . . . He's Murray Rumshinsky, son of the Joseph who's composed most of Molly's songs . . . The angle here is almost a Strauss father-son relationship, in which the younger is trying to make a place for his own music without impinging on his father's name . . . It's not easy, but an important audition in New York this week may make big news for Murray and one of next season's most touted musicals . . . And as Molly's accompanist for 25 years, he's perfect, got all the nuances and timing down pat.

NEW BILLS AROUND today, with Charlie Chaplin taking over at three houses . . . His "City Lights" is revived at both the Dupont and the Little and Pix brings back his "Burlesque on Carmen." . . . "No Sad Songs for Me," with Margaret Sullavan, gets two preview showings at the Playhouse, with the zitherful "Third Man" going on for the last time at 6:25 . . . The National brings back Agnes Keith's story of life in a Jap prison camp, "Three Came Home." . . . And Keith's has decided its crime-doesn't-pay lesson for tomorrow ("The Capture") must wait a week; James Mason and Marta Toren get the spot instead in "One Way Street." . . . Today only the Apex bills Shaw's "Pygmalion."

YESTERDAY'S CLOUDBURST brought the news that the Glen Echo pool will open a week from Thursday, the 25th, for its nineteenth season. . . . Any connection?

FRIDAY MIDNIGHT brings a benefit performance to the Howard Theater, aiding the National Negro Opera Co. drive headed by Mary Cardwell Dawson. . . . Two features will be "A Night at the Opera," with music from noted New York and Washington members, and a "Fashion Cavalcade" from the Gotham and Paris ateliers.

Taft Sees 75% of GOP Voting FEPC Cloture

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), yesterday predicted 75 percent or more of the Senate Republicans would support a motion to consider the Administration's FEPC bill.

Support of the motion for cloture closing debate does not, however, necessarily mean support of the Administration's compulsory FEPC bill.

If the necessary 64 votes are obtained for cloture, a move will follow to substitute the GOP voluntary measure, authored originally by Taft and passed by the House. There is far less opposition among Southern Democrats to the voluntary educational measure.

Taft's announcement brought forth a statement from Southern Democrats that pressure by Republican leaders has cost them about half a dozen expected GOP votes in their fight to block Senate consideration of the measure.

As the Senate entered its second week of debate on taking up the measure, the Southerners still expressed confidence in having enough votes to stop it. Most of the first week of debate was taken up with other matters.

Under the tentative timetable now scheduled by the Administration, the cloture petition is expected to be filed Wednesday, with a vote on Friday.

Meanwhile, on the floor, Senator Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) ripped into the Administration's FEPC move as "a sham" and a "phony."

He charged the Administration with giving "lip service" to the measure "while trying to defeat it."

Ferguson said it was significant that Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (D., Ill.), waited until after the primaries in Alabama and Florida before moving to take up the bill.

The Michigan Senator accused the Administration of trying to "deceive" the American people by saying the Democratic party was "unified" on civil rights legislation.

Jonathan Daniels, former presidential assistant, now North Carolina national committeeman, "upset the applecart" yesterday at Chicago, Ferguson said, when he announced he could not go along with the party stand.

"You cannot have a prohibition law against discrimination in the South," Daniels said.

Then Ferguson read excerpts from speeches made during the recent Alabama primary campaign by Senators John J. Sparkman and Lister Hill to the effect that the Republicans would not join with the Southern Democrats in killing off FEPC. Therefore, according to Ferguson, Sparkman and Hill urged Southerners to support the Democratic Party in order to fight civil rights bills.

Ferguson said these developments should "spike forever the charges of a conspiracy between Republicans and Southern Democrats" to defeat civil rights legislation. If there is a conspiracy, Ferguson said, it is between Northern Senator Russell B. Long (D., La.) interjected that Republicans had never voted to do anything for the South.

Ferguson cited the Senate-passed aid to education bill under which the Southern States would derive the most benefit.

Long called that "a gesture signifying nothing," since the bill is still bottled up in the House.

Cites Religious Dispute

Taft commented that the aid-to-education difficulty is caused by "a religious dispute between two Democratic Congressmen," Representatives John Lesinski (D., Mich.) and Graham A. Barden (D., N. C.).

In his prepared statement of support for the cloture petition, Taft noted that if the Democrats could get even a much smaller percentage of their 54 votes in the Senate than the Republictns colture would be passed.

"Before the Chicago meeting of the Democratic Party breaks up, I hope President Truman, Senate Majority Leader Scott Lucas, and Democratic Senate Campaign Chairman Clinton P. Anderson will get down to cases and arrange for the necessary votes instead of talking in beautiful terms about the theory of civil rights," Taft said.

Senator Olin D. Johnston (D., S. C.) yesterday continued his attack on FEPC as unconstitutional.

Senator Leverett Saltonstall (R., Mass.) argued that practical experience in New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts and Connecticut show that compulsory FEPC laws work very well.

Hecht Sales Dip 3.4% in First Period

By S. Oliver Goodman

The Hecht Co. yesterday reported net sales of $18,017,386 for the three months ended April 29, a dip of $640,247 or 3.4 percent under the same period last year. The three months is the first quarter of the chain's fiscal year.

However, for the 12 months ended April 29, net sales aggregated $83,389,624, a gain of $474,077 or 0.6 percent over the comparable period a year ago.

The figures were released last night by President Samuel M. Hecht and include the total dollar volume of The Hecht Co. stores in Washington, New York City, Baltimore, Annapolis, Easton and Silver Spring, Md. A new branch store has been authorized by the board of directors to serve the nearby Virginia area.

DISCOUNT: Comes word from New York that the syndicate which bought Potomac Electric Power Co.'s 35-year 2¾s on May 8 at a bid of 100.8025 has ended the account with only about one-third of the 30-million-dollar issue distributed at the issue yield of 2.70 percent. Left to distress placement in a free market, blocks of the bonds changed hands at discounts from issue price. Not all of the bonds were offered at such discounts, however, and some substantial blocks of the issue are reported still awaiting placement.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Edward F. Nuse, former manager of the Washington photographic records division of Remington Rand, Inc., has joined J. D. Marsh & Associates . . . Myron W. Krueger, treasurer of Raymond Concrete Pile Co., will address Wednesday's meeting of Washington chapter, National Association of Cost Accountants. . . . Carl C. Crowe has been elevated to secretary and assistant treasurer of National Coal Association in Washington. . . . Stran Summers has been named chairman of the Pennsylvania Canners Association. . . . William H. Kearns, jr., formerly in the office of public information under the Secretary of Defense in Washington, has been appointed associate editor of Fleet Owner and Bus Transportation, a McGraw-Hill publication.

LIVELY TRADE: Transactions in Potomac Electric Power Co. "rights" continued lively yesterday on the Washington Stock Exchange, with 23,294 warrants changing hands. The "rights" close at 9.375 cents each (3/32 of a dollar). It takes five "rights" to buy one share of Pepco at $14.50.

ODD LOTS: The Nation's steel mills are expected to top all previous production records this week, operating at 101.3 percent of rated capacity to turn out 1,931,000 net tons of ingots and steel for castings . . . Tidewater Association Oil Co. on July 1 will redeem the remaining 133,332 shares of its $3.75 cumulative preferred stock at $106 a share and accrued dividends . . . The J. Henry Hooper Agency of Provident Mutual Life Insurance has moved to the Wire Building . . . Consolidated Edison Co. is planning a dividend increase. Chairman Ralph H. Tapscott told shareholders at the annual meeting . . . Charles F. Adams, former Navy Secretary, was elected honorary board chairman of State Street Trust Co., Chicago, and Allan Forbes succeeds him as chairman. Edward L. Bigelow was elected president.

PARLEY: Government workers who report on trading activities and prices at fruit, vegetable, poultry and dairy markets will meet in Chicago May 27-29 to see if they can find ways of giving better service. The meeting is the first of its kind since the Government started furnishing detailed information on such markets more than 30 years ago. It is being sponsored by the Agriculture Department's Production and Marketing Administration.

EARNINGS: Diamond Match Co. reported net income of $1,304,358 or $1.17 a share for the first quarter, compared with $1,080,359 or 91 cents a share in same 1949 period. Other earnings statements:

TB Dangers Multiply for Lab Workers

By a Post Reporter

Baltimore, May 15.—New mixes of tuberculosis germs are infecting laboratory workers "right and left" with the disease they seek to combat, bacteriologists were warned here today.

The infection dangers have already been recognized by U. S. Public Health Service officials who are taking protective steps, said Dr. A. G. Wedum, safety director at Camp Detrick, Md., the Army's biological warfare research center.

Dr. Wedum demonstrated laboratory infection dangers in a special movie and exhibit, shown for the first time today at the opening sessions here of the 50th annual meeting of the Society of American Bacteriologists.

Laboratory danger of tuberculosis infection has always attended work with the live TB organisms, Dr. Wedum said in an interview, but the incidence of such infections "has become really alarming" in the past two years.

This, he explained, is due to the development of more potent cultures of tuberculosis germs, cultures "loaded" with the tubercle bacilli instead of old-style cultures in which the germs grew only on the surface.

He said he personally knew of one research project in tuberculosis in which six of the nine investigators were infected, "despite routine laboratory precautions."

Similar reports received by Public Health Service officials, he said, have led to sterner protective measures in research projects.

frequently, and certainly is not present in the majority, he said.

Dr. Sabin declined to discuss eventual use of the factor in human poliomyelitis, eithed as a preventive or modifier of infantile paralysis. The next step, he cautioned, is to try it on monkeys.

The search for the antiviral substance in milk was begun, he explained, after studies on the epidemic of polio among the Eskimos revealed that although 20 percent of all other age groups suffered varying degrees of paralysis, none of the colony's breast-fed children under 3 years of age was similarly afflicted.

The milk factor, Dr. Sabin said, apparently gives some immunity to polio infection itself, but where that fails, it at least prevents paralysis.

Laboratory success of the little-used antibiotic, subtilin, against a common strain of the influenza virus, and against Newcastle disease of chickens, was reported here by Dr. A. J. Salle of Los Angeles, Calif.

If subsequent testings bear out its similar activity in humans, subtilin will prove to be the first specific drug against influenza. Present therapy in "flu" is directed largely at building up the body's own defenses against the disease, and treating its secondary infections.

Dr. Salle said the influenze work, to date, has been confined to chick embryos, but that further research would soon begin on guinea pigs and other laboratory animals.

The influenza virus strains subdued in the chick embryo work included both A and B types, while the Newcastle disease virus was that strain which cuts heavily into the profits of poultry raising, he said.

reluctantly—rang his little dinner bell a couple of times, but surly-like. Miss Winter says he does it cheerfully whenever he's hungry, which is usually.

Also went to his potty once. Goodwin photographed him there, probably upset him.

Goodwin tried for some more pictures. Dizzy kicked, growled and retired under sofa. Rest of story is as told by Miss Winter.

Seems she is long-time fancier of rabbits for pets. First was named Trouble, weighed 13 pounds, loved to romp in woods at end of leash. So well housebroken, however, that it would drag accompanying human back into house when it had to go to bathroom. Liked milk, lived for three years, died of heart trouble.

Second rabbit, black and white, named Panda. Liked orange juice. Lived six years, died of heart trouble.

Present rabbit, chinchilla gray, 3 years old, gives other people heart trouble. Story of visitor (Miss Winter's, not Dizzy's) arriving New Year's Eve feeling dandy; saw two copies of same magazine on table, got vaguely troubled; Dizzy, hungry, came out and rang bell; visitor left, screaming. (Check Alcoholics Anonymous for name.)

Dizzy sleeps in cage, likes it (gives him feeling of security). Scratches to come out at 6 a. m.

A little later rings bell for more food. Helps with housework by jumping on beds while they're being made, sliding on towels, linen, dust cloth if those articles are draged on floor. Nibbles at broom, horses around generally.

Likes cool weather best. If too hot, Miss Winter puts electric fan on him. Miss Winte radvises that if Dizzy or any other rabbit gets heat prostration, best remedy is piece of ice on back of neck. Nice thing to know.

Dizzy has never met a lady rabbit. Doesn't seem to know what he's missing, Miss Winter says.

Reason for rabbit as pet is that apartment lease forbids cats and dogs, doesn't say anything about rabbits.

Miss Winter invited Goodwin and me back later in evening to see Dizzy when he really hits his stride.

Perish forbid.

Syracuse, N. Y., May 15 (AP).—Anthony Pambroni, 71, of Skaneateles, tugged at a wood in his garden and fell backward when it came loose suddenly.

Onondaga General Hospital reported today he suffered fractures of the skull, back, six ribs, an arm, a shoulder and a collarbone. His condition was described as fair.

Truman, Marshall to Hail 'Jefferson Papers'

Release of the first volume of "The Papers of Thomas Jefferson" will be marked by a ceremony at which President Truman will speak in the Library of Congress at 3:30 p. m. Wednesday.

Also participating in the ceremony will be General George C. Marshall, Douglas Southall Freeman, the distinguished editor and historian, acting Librarian of Congress Verner W. Clapp, and Harold W. Dodds, president of Princeton University, which is publishing the papers.

Dodds will present to the President and General Marshall copies of the first volume of the 52-volume series, at the ceremony in Coolidge Auditorium, admission to which will be by invitation only.

One of the largest book publishing ventures in American history, the series is not expected to be completed until 1963. Julian P. Boyd, librarian of Princeton University, is editor of the venture, which when completed will have cost about one million dollars. About one-third of the cost represents editorial expenses, toward which the New York Times Company contributed $200,000.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

As we get older, stress and strain, overexertion, excessive smoking or exposure to cold sometimes slows down kidney function. This may lead many folks to complain of nagging backache, loss of pep and energy, headaches and dizziness. Getting up nights or frequent passages may result from minor bladder irritations due to cold, dampness or dietary indiscretions.

If your discomforts are due to these causes, don't wait, try Doan's Pills, a mild diuretic. Used successfully by millions for over 50 years. While these symptoms may often otherwise occur, it's amazing how many times Doan's give happy relief—help the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters flush out waste. Get Doan's Pills today!

ENROUTE TO CHICAGO, May 15.—A couple more performances of the same excellence, and Senor Conrado Marrero will be pitching himself into one of the lower berths traditionally referred for the important guys on a ball club. The little senor is now traveling with the Nats to Chicago via upper, but he is fast outgrowing baseball's caste system.

POVICH

All of a sudden, Chico is commanding a new esteem from Manager Bucky Harris who was counting on his fingers this afternoon and discovering that in 18 1/3 innings of relief pitching since the season opened, Marrero has surrendered only one run.

That is a sumptuous sort of record and Marrero knows it, too. At least he gives you that impression. You can read it into his contented pulling on those big, black Havana cigars and his exhaling of the biggest, most perfect smoke rings that ever bespoke high contentment if not downright expansiveness.

All's well with his world at this point and he's wondering now if it wouldn't be nice to learn the English language which he had been resisting on the assumption that he wasn't long for this country anyway.

It's no secret that Bucky Harris was vastly indifferent back in March when Joe Cambria, the Nats' Havana scout, put a shipping tag on Marrero and consigned him to Harris at Orlando, Fla. Harris held nothing against Cubans as such—he'd happily embrace a Hottentot who could win 15 games for him. But many had tried and none had ever made good for him.

HARRIS WAS MORE smitten by Marrero's sense of humor than by the fellow's physical appearance following their introduction at Orlando through the good offices of Shortstop Willy Miranda who spoke both launguages. Conrado, 5-feet-7, kewpie-shaped, was far from anybody's conception of what a pitcher should look like. But, with Miranda's help, Harris was attempting to make polite small talk. "Ask him," said Harris to Miranda, "If he is a family man." The interpreter spat a stream of Spanish at Marrero who broke into a grin at the questioning, looked at Harris, and then answered Miranda. "He say," said Miranda to Harris, "He got one wife, two leetle peetcher and one leetle shortstop."

He could also have told Harris that he has a knuckle ball which he calls "el curvo." That's what he used to strike out Big Walt Dropo with the bases full the other day, on only three pitches, after Dropo had hit two home runs earlier in the afternoon.

MARRERO HAD WALKED into that situation as Dick Weik's relief and three pitches later he was out of it.

The only hit the Red Sox got off him in 2 1/3 innings, was a single to left by Ken Keltner that took a freak hop over Yost's head, and in the next inning Marrero fanned Williams on four pitches, just for the fun of it. Just before that happened, Al Evans walked to the mound and suggested that he pitch Williams fast, low and outside. Chico shook his catcher off emphatically. "El curvo," he said.

With Harris starting pitchers what they are, little Chico is heaven-sent and has just about replaced Mickey Harris as the Nats' No. 1 relief man. In fact, Manager Harris is now definitely nursing the notion that Marrero can relieve Mickey from his relief pitching chores and thus give the Nats another badly-needed starting pitcher, which would amount to a double premium from the Cuban.

Marrero wasn't any hot-shot in spring training. He was even something of a disappointment in light of the fact that he had been pitching in the Havana Winter League and was supposed to have an edge in condition.

HARRIS FRANKLY was dismissing him until one night in Philadelphia when he yanked him out of the bullpen as a stop-gap after the A's had shelled Joe Haynes for four runs in one and a third innings.

That's when the senor took hold smartly. He went in with one out in the second, stayed the rest of the distance, and didn't allow any runs. His next was a 7 2/3-inning relief shift against the White Sox last week. He allowed one run. He has allowed only two walks and is the best control pitcher on the Washington club.

Harris might even start the Cuban Tuesday night against the White Sox in Chicago. And, if gets away with that one, the Nats' management will eagerly promote him to a lower berth on these train rides.

"Not only that," says Harris happily, "but you can quote me on this: If Marrero keeps winning for us, he can have my drawing room and I'll take his upper."

MUDDER'S DAY—Since harness racers must be worked regularly, Paul Snyder of Clarksburg, W. Va., put Dona June, his trotting mare, through her paces yesterday at Rosecroft and got a mud bath, but good. The day was too bad for regular racing, but not for training. Rosecroft opens its 20-night meeting at Oxon Hill next Monday

Stewart's .352 Makes Him Nats' Regular

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

En Route to Chicago, May 15.—Eddie Stewart, flourishing a .352 average has won his way anew into the affection of the Nat's management and is in Bucky Harris' outfield under either left or right handed pitching condition.

The skittish, 34-year-old Stewart has put Gil Coan in the shade and will keep him on the bench in the upcoming three-game series with the White Sox starting tomorrow.

Stewart has stepped into the fixture role that belonged to Outfielder Irv Noren before that young man's appendix flared up, necessitating a three-week convalescense. He is no less left-handed than Coan but Harris deems him a better risk against the southpaw pitching the Nats will see at Chicago.

Mele Coming Strong

Sam Mele is moving up with Stewart as a fixture, which is unsurprising inasmuch as Mele has been whaling away at a .385 rate since he got a chance to play following Noren's operation. Coan and Bob Ortiz will share the third outfield job, depending on the type of pitching.

Meanwhile Merrill Combs, the Nats' recent infield acquisition from the Red Sox, is wondering if he has run completely out of luck, facing six southpaws in seven games, a factor not conducive to his own left-handed hitting style.

"And he'll see nothing but left-handers starting against us at Chicago," pointed out Harris. "That's a tough way for Combs to break in after spending virtually two years on the Boston bench, and I'm making allowances for him." At that Combs has not been looking too unimpressive. He has made 7 hits in 21 times at bat, and in the field he has been completely adequate, some times brilliant.

Harris is quite pleased with his maneuver in shifting Sam Dente to second base despite that young man's lack of experience. "He'll get better and be one of the better second basemen in the league," predicted Harris, an old second baseman himself.

Rosecroft Trotters and Pacers Begin Their Schooling Today

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

The trotters and pacers get off today at Rosecroft Raceway—unofficially.

Dr. A. C. Goff, veterinarian who's one of the top starters in the game, will begin schooling horses at the automotive barrier for the Oxon Hill opening next Monday night.

A sizable horse delegation already is on the scene. Attracted by the more lucrative stakes programs at both Rosecroft and Laurel, it includes a number of good ones.

In certain jeopardy are the track marks established last year in Rosecroft's initial season. Buckshot B. trotted a mile in 2:06 4-5 and William E. Miller's Henry Volo paced the pacers with a 2:05 4-5 performance.

Right now there are more than a dozenu horses working out that have better records.

Octave Blake, S. Plainfield, N. J., president of the Grand Circuit, has a strong stable being handled by Del Cameron, thirteenth leading money-winning driver last season.

Mighty Express is the Blake hope for the Hambletonian trotting classic. The 3-year-old is a 15-to-1 shot in the winter book and raced a 2:04 4-5 mile as a 2-year-old. Blake's Romola Hal was the fastest 3-year-old pacing filly last year with a 2:00 3-5 mark. Another stalwart is Friskaway, 5-year-old mare who laid off last year after going a mile in 1:59 4-5 as a 3-year-old.

Willian N. Reynolds, millionnaire tobacco magnate, will be represented by Mysteria, trotting filly who's entered in the Hambletonian. She was the leading 2-year-old money-winning filly last year with $15,842.

Del Miller, trainer for Reynolds, also plans to race sturdy Atomic Bomb and Lorraine, fastest pacing mare last season with a 1:59 record. This season, however, the stable is converting Lorraine into a trotter.

Marshall, Al Martin, Pillette Go In Shakeup

New York, May 15.—The New York Yankees embarked on a wholesale hodsecleaning today, selling Johnny Lindell to the St. Louis Cardinals, Clarence Marshall to the St. Louis Browns and sending Johnny Mize, Al Martin and Duane Pillette to their Kansas City farm.

Only Mize's sudden demotion came as a surprise, but the Yankees explained that he was sent down only to "strengthen his arm." The one-time slugging hero of the National League, who was bought from the New York Giants last season, will continue to draw his $25,000 major league salary.

After all this the Yanks are still in the market for that additional starting pitcher Manager Casey Stengel has been yelping for.

It begins to look, in fact, as though the other clubs in the American League have no intention of bolstering the Bombers' hill staff. Several of the Yanks cut loose today had been dangled as "trade bait" in Stengel's desperate quest of a hurler.

Down to Limit

Now the champs are down to size—inside the 25-player limit which must be met by Wednesday midnight—and they have little left to offer in swap other than George Stirnweiss, a somewhat portly infielder, and a spare catcher or two.

Mize, long the terror of National League pitchers was shipped to the club's Kansas City farm team on a 24-hour recall basis.

Pillette, a 26-year-old pitcher, and Martin, a 22-year-old infielder tabbed for future greatness with the Yanks, are also on 24-hour recall basis.

Lindell, the big outfielder, left the Bombers for good—waived out of the American League and sold to the Cards at the waiver price of $10,000. Failure to hit this spring cost Johnny his last chance with the Yanks, who are well loaded with outfielders.

Marshall, a right-handed pitcher, was sold to the Browns for an unannounced sum, possibly not in excess of $10,000.

He, along with Lindell, Stirnweiss and Catchers Gus Niarhos, Charlie Silvera and Ralph Houk, have been offered to other American League clubs — especially Washington—all spring in exchange for a proven pitcher.

Mize Okays Deal

As Mize, now 37, has been in the majors over 10 years he had to give his consent to the Kansas City deal. He could have insisted on his outright release and then tried to deal himself to another big league team.

Although he has been of no use this spring because of his inability to throw, Mize occupies a warm spot in Stengel's heart for that pinch hit he whanged off the wall at Ebbets Field to win a World Series game from the Dodgers last fall.

Counting Dick Wakefield, the Yanks still are a man over the player limit.

Americans Win In British Open

Newcastle, Northern Ireland, May 15 (AP).—Long-hitting Grace Lenczyk of Newington, Conn., and Dot Kielty of Los Angeles reached the third round of the British Women's Golf Championship today with a trio of victories.

Miss Lenczyk put on a shattering display of distance driving and fancy putting to eliminate Mrs. B. T. O'Reilly of Ireland in a morning round match that ended on the 11th hole.

Pamela Davies, British Girl's Champion, carried Miss Lenczyk to the seventeenth hole before the American closed out the match, 3 and 1.

Miss Kielty breezed past Anne Scargill of England, 6 and 5, in a second-round match after advancing through the first round on a bye.

Video Doesn't Hurt Sports Attendance

MILWAUKEE, MAY 15 (AP).—Spectator sports have nothing to fear at the gate from television, a University of Pennsylvania graduate student contended today.

"Television is not a major attendance factor," Jerry N. Jordan, who conducted a two-year study of the effect of telecasts on sports attendance, told the National Association of Newspaper Promotion Managers.

"Higher incomes and shorter working hours, management and performance and publicity are major factors at the gate."

Jordan said his statements were based on actual attendance figures all over the country—"on just about every kind of condition we could find anywhere."

Involved in the testing program, which started two years ago at Princeton University and was concluded at Pennsylvania, were 460 major and minor league baseball clubs, 192 colleges and universities, 32 high schools and 100 arenas and race tracks in 572 cities across the Nation. The combined attendance figures were in excess of 124,000,000 paid admissions, Jordan said.

"Television increases the home audience without decreasing attendance by getting more people interested in sports," Jordan said. "The size of the television audience at home has no relation whatever to the difference in the size of crowds (at the event)."

JORDAN SHOWED figures which he said proved that television set owners bought twice as many season tickets for college football than did non-owners among the public at large.

The recent action of the Western Conference in banning live television of football next fall, for the protection of small college attendance, was challenged by Jordan.

He said more college football was telecast in the Big Ten area a year ago than in any other section—"and a higher percentage of schools increased their attendance than in any other area in the country.

"Small colleges in the Western Conference television areas had an even better attendance record than in other sections," he added.

SHIFTING TO BASEBALL, Jordan said attendance for major league games was in almost direct ratio to team performance. Last season, when 15 of the 16 clubs permitted television, the seven which improved their standing over 1948 showed an attendance boost of 7.2 percent, he said, while the nine with a lower performance record dropped 15.3 percent in attendance. The nine included Pittsburgh, the only club not televised.

Minor league baseball teams near the telecasts of a major league club were hurt at the gate, Jordan admitted, but said his study showed this was due primarily to "major league competition for attendance at night games."

"However," said Jordan, "we do not agree with the many who gloomily predict that television threatens the future of minor league baseball.

"THE MINOR LEAGUES set their fourth straight attendance record in 1949—nearly 42 million admissions. Less than three percent of the minor league teams are within television range of any major league city and some of them showed no evidence of hurt.

"That doesn't look like much of a threat."

Jordan said that 13 out of the 18 minor league teams permitting television gained or lost in attendance in direct relation to improved or lower performance on the fjeld.

"I realize there still will be differences of opinion about the effect of television on sports attendance," Jordan concluded.

"The main conclusions I have given you were not based upon opinion. They were based upon cold, hard facts of actual paid admissions.

"Either a person buys a ticket or he does not. Nobody's opinion can cloud that issue."

Bob Hope Fan Puts In Early Bid for Her Ticket

A small elderly lady made a special trip downtown to the sports desk last evening and said:

"I want to request a favor. May I buy a $5 ticket in an aisle seat up near the stage for the show at the Armory that Bob Hope will star in? I'm pretty small and I just naturally like to be up near the actors."

The little lady meant the production the night of June 3, Saturday, that will be part of the National Celebrities Golf Tournament program.

Her reservation was taken, of course, although the ticket sale for both the golf tournament at the Army-Navy Country Club, June 3-4, and the show at the Armory, will not open until Wednesday morning.

The little lady's request may be a tip to you: Come early for your ticket. A turn-away crowd saw the Arthur Godfrey "Homecoming" show last year, you know.

Golf tournament prices: Adult daily ticket, $2.40; adult season ticket (good for both days), $3.60; children, daily, $1.20.

Bob Hope Show: Prices are $1, $2, $3, $4, and $5.

Tickets to both the tournament and the Hope show will be on sale in the lobby of The Washington Post, 1337 E st. nw.; Fairway Sports Shop, 816 13th st. nw., and Champions Sports Shop, 816 13th st. nw.

Money orders will be accepted. Address them to The Washington Post, and make all checks payable to The Washington Post Golf Tournament Fund.

Bass Wins Roads Open

Annapolis, Md., May 15 (AP).—Johnny Bass, 37-year-old Clifton Park pro, won the third annual Annapolis Roads Open Golf Tournament on the 19th hole today.

Bass shot a par 4 on the extra hole to defeat Harold Oatman, Norfolk, Va., in a playoff for the title after the two tied with par 70s in the 18-hole medal play.

Oatman had a bogie 5, just missing a five-foot putt, as Bass chipped up to within four feet and dropped his putt for a par.

Ralph Bogart of Chevy Chase, Md., with a 73 for 18 holes over the nine-hole 3254-yard course, led the amateur field.

The 6-foot 2-inch Bass and pudgy, 39-year-old Oatman agreed before the sudden-death playoff to split first prize money in the $250 cash-added tournament. Each pocketed $99.

About the Celebrities

JIM THORPE has finally worked things out so that he can play in the National Celebrities Golf Tournament, June 3-4, at the Army-Navy Country Club.

Legendary Jim is scheduled on the West Coast early in June to act as technical adviser on a movie to be made of Thorpe's life.

JIM THORPE

For a month or more, he has been trying to figure out a way to be in two places—in Washington for the Celebs and in California—at the same time.

Yesterday his wife, Patricia, who handles Jim's business affairs, sent word from Hollywood that arrangements have been made for Thorpe to stay over for the Celebrities. Jim was in New York last night, honored in ceremonies at Madison Square Garden.

Thorpe, now 61, was the only double winner in the Associated Press' poll a few months ago to determine the most outstanding athletes of the past 50 years. Thorpe was voted not only the No. 1 football player but finished ahead of Babe Ruth for the highest honor of all—that of being the greatest male athletic of the half century.

Thorpe is reputed to have shot in the 80's the first time he ever went around a golf course.

DANNY KAYE returned to these shores yesterday from a month's visit in Europe, and immediately began making plans to take part in the Celebrities.

Arriving in New York aboard the Queen Elizabeth, Danny said:

"I have to go to the West Coast right away to see what my schedule is in the movie colony. I think I can make it back for the Celebrities, perhaps fly in. I'll know for sure in about a week.

"I've heard all about the Celebrities. Great stuff and I don't want to miss this one. My golf isn't in the 70s but that won't make any difference, will it?"

You're apologetic about your game, Danny, with Godfrey and Winchell playing?

GABE MENENDEZ, who puts on the fights and wrestles at Turner's arena, retains his title as the town's champion ticket-buyer for the big show held in conjunction with the Celebrities tournament each year, this time with Bob Hope as emcee.

For the fourth year in a row, Gabe beat all others to the draw and came up with another $100 bill for 20 of the best $5 seats in the house (at the Armory).

Among out-of-towners with reservations already in: Miss Frances M. Roach, a banker girl (First and Merchants National) at Richmond. Frances will take in the tournament both days and see the Hope show Saturday night.

Stotesbury Cup Race Next for W-L

By Happy Walker

AS WAS TO BE expected, Washington and Lee High's varsity rowing crew handily captured the northern Virginia championship over a much smaller George Washington High crew this past weekend, and in so doing, hung up their third straight win of the season.

Walker

With six hold-overs from last year's national championship crew and three last year's junior varsity strokes, Coach Charlie Butt was more interested in pointing his top crews for the coming weekend assault on the Stotesbury Cup events at Philadelphia than in annexing the northern Virginia crown. It will be remembered that this rowing team journeyed to Philadelphia last year unknown and claimed the coveted Stotesbury Cup and crown.

Some 40 W. & L. hopefuls, under Coach Butt, will take off Friday morning, arriving in Philadelphia in time for the trial sprints late in the afternoon. Saturday, Coach Butt will send his W. & L. varsity, junior varsity and freshman crews in to the three eight-oared events and the four-oared and double races. Expected to repeat last year's performance in the varsity eight and retain the Stotesbury mug are Kado Beacham at bow, Milton Irving, No. 5; Paul Yeager (captain), No. 6; Roger Scott, No. 7; Pete Sparhawk, No. 8, and newcomers Foster Smith, No. 4; Dave Scofield, No. 2, and Wes Dalby, No. 3. Dick McCombs will be in the coxswain spot.

GEORGE WASHINGTON University's customary top-ranking sailors barely squeaked by in winning the Greater Washington area sailing championship this past weekend from Maryland U., Georgetown U. and Navy. St. John's of Annapolis entered but did not put in an appearance.

George Collins amassed 21 points for Division A high point winner, while Bob Harwood and Jack Martin (Md.) split Division B high point with 23 points each.

In Saturday's races, Maryland, prerace underdogs, pulled up equal with G. W. at 30 points each. However, on Sunday, the Buff and Blue crew sparked by sailing aces George Collins and Bob Harwood put on the pressure to edge out Navy with 44 points. Close behind were Navy with 42 points, followed by Maryland 41 and Georgetown 38.

THE SECOND race of the Potomac River Sailing Association weekend doubleheader, saw some 35 skippers battling strong winds which sent miniature white caps over their bows, on the choppy Potomac. Double wins featured all but two of the classes during the day.

Les Schneidter in ShoNuf and James P. Googe in Gullah II, captured first and second place wins in both handicap events. In the Lightning class, Bob Johnson and Arthur Carnduff outsailed the field for double first and second place wins.

Ed Manders, sailing Pop's Headache, in the Comets accounted for two first wins, with Russell Parker in Dorrie and Edgar Powers in Janilyn, placing second.

Arcave Runs 3d in Race Without Bets

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, May 15.—In a thrilling nose-photo finish seldom witnessed in a three-horse race C. V. Whitney's Dooly defeated Mrs. James Carson's Kinsman here today. Third in the test, dubbed the Preakness Prep, was S. W. Labrot, jr's Arcave two lengths behind the gallant on-the-wire battle for first money of $5000.

The race proved little as far as Saturday's classic, the second leg of the Triple Crown, is concerned except that both Dooly, who finished eleventh in the Derby, and Kinsman are excellent off-track horses. S. E. Veitch, the Whitney trainer, said before the race that Dooly would go coupled with Mr. Trouble in the Preakness if the mud comes up.

Kinsman was giving four pounds to Dooly and six to Arcave and his showing gave further evidence to the fact that Trainer E. I. Kelly definitely will start the son of Whirlway in the big race.

Arcave was not disgraced, with the absence of a speed horse, he was forced to set his own pace and was not abused when he lost the lead on the swing to the stretch. Better suited to a fast strip, Arcave's handlers naturally will pull for dry going on Saturday.

Fans Cheer Anyway

Despite the fact that the Prep was conducted without official betting, the sparse crowd of 6000 got a kick out of the stirring struggle to the wire and the volume of rooting was as pronounced as for any other event on the nine-race program.

Dooly, the longest shot in the field had there been wagering, was clocked in 1:53 2-5 for the mile and a furlong, excellent time over a strip extremely soggy as the result of torrential rains this morning. Jockey James Lynch handled the son of Eight Thirty in faultless fashion.

Even if today's three contestants are starters, the outlook for entries in the Preakness is for a field of hardly more than eight starters with many predicting only six will face Starter Eddie Blind.

Of course, the mainstays—Hill Prince, due here tomorrow, and Middleground, Derby winner—will go. Mr. Trouble is considered a definite starter, as is Balkan, owned by Mrs. W. H. Labrot. Trainer Andy Schuttinger will decide tomorrow about putting up the $500 starting fee for Ferd.

The absence of Your Host from the field appears pleasing to several camps. Mr. Trouble, who was worn out wrestling with the pacemaker in the Derby, should profit, while Hill Prince backers say, "the smaller the field, the better our chances."

Bill Bennings

Dear Folks— At Pimlico No Tuesday racing here. Action will be resumed on Wednesday and, with the Preakness coming up, the meeting should gain momentum. Eddie Blind, starter here, has been signed for a similar post at Monmouth Park. Apprentice Eddie Sanders, who began his career at Charles Town, is topping the local riders. The W. P. Taylor horses including Magnet were shipped to Chicago, going from there to Detroit. Favorites are batting .320 here with 28 successes in 88 races. The largest field to start in a Preakness was 18 in 1928 with Victorian, Sonny Workman up, as the winner. Lest we forget, post time for the first race next Saturday, Preakness Day, will be 2 p. m., 15 minutes earlier than usual. See you on the rail—BILL.

REMEMBER THE AZTECS—You couldn't help but remember them if you were around Washington 31 years ago for they were beating every sandlot baseball team in sight in those days. Last night, a group of boys cut up a few touches and relived their sandlot days at their third annual dinner. That's Catcher Bo Bregman, all five feet of him, on the shoulders of Country Harris, the second baseman. On the left, is Willie Snow, Aztec shortstop, while on the far right is Lefty McIntyre, the ageless pitcher who claims to have seen service with 133 different teams, including the one and only Aztecs

Jets Jettisoned By Jersey, 19 to 18

New Jersey Jolters administered the Washington Jets a 19-18 defeat in a Roller Derby game before 4381 spectators at Uline Arena last night.

Ed Stewart's .352 Average Makes Him Outfield Regular

at Boston didn't please Harris, but he refuses to be panicked.

"We got well-pitched games from Scarborough and Hudson even if they lost," he said, "and over the long haul I think we'll be all right. We'd have won two, maybe three, if Ed Robinson had been hitting."

Harris revealed that Robinson, in his worst slump with a .180 average, frankly apologized the other day and even suggested that Harris drop him out of the cleanup spot if he liked.

"It won't make me mad," said Robinsnn.

Whereat Harris reverted to his well-known psychology with slumping hitters. "You're still the best hitter on this club, Robby," he said, "and I'm not moving you. Don't let that be among your worries. Just quit trying to murder everything you swing at, and you'll snap out of it."

IN SHORT: Joe Haynes or Chico Marrero will pitch for the Nats at Chicago tomorrow, with Hudson and Scarborough also ticketed as starters in the three-game series . . . Boston papers are reviving the Scarborough-to-the-Red Sox talk with the suggestion that Bill Goodman may go to the Nats. Harris denies everything .

MEN OVER 25 WHOSE HAIR IS GETTING THIN-GROOM IT WITH KREML

TO AVOID THAT GREASY LOOK—MAKE HAIR LOOK MORE ABUNDANT

If you're feeling self-conscious about your hair getting thin on top or receding at the temples, don't call attention to it by plastering your hair down with greasy, sticky products which leave an unsightly, dirt-trapping, shiny film on the scalp. Now is the time to graduate to Kreml!

Kreml Hair Tonic is different from any dressing you've ever used. It never looks greasy or sticky—it never plasters hair down. Instead, Kreml is especially blended to thoroughly spread through the hair and make it look naturally well-groomed—make hair look thicker, more abundant. Also unsurpassed to remove dandruff flakes and give sleepy scalps a delightful 'wake-up' tingle. Ask for the new large 16-oz. size of Kreml Hair Tonic and save nearly 50%.

Mailmen Assail Order Cutting Daily Delivery

More than 850 letter carriers, in three-day session here, yesterday unanimously adopted a resolution protesting the Postoffice Department's order to reduce daily mail deliveries from two to one.

William C. Doherty, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, charged Postmaster General Jesse M. Donaldson with being "completely neglectful of the responsibility of his position."

"The Postmaster General by his order of April 18 has struck a mortal blow to dependable communication in the United States," said the group's resolution.

The Postmaster General's failure to consult postmasters, supervisors and rank-and-file employes before issuing the order showed a "total absence of intelligent labor-management relations," Doherty told the group, meeting at the Washington Hotel.

The next two days will be spent in a campaign on Capitol Hill to solicit congressional support of pending legislation to rescind the cutback order.

Southern Drive Mapped by Union

New York, May 15 (AP).—A one-million-dollar campaign to organize the southern hosiery industry was mapped out today at the thirty-eighth annual convention of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers (Ind.).

Alexander McKeown of Philadelphia, international president of the union, said 55 paid organizers would be sent to the South.

Haas Named School Aide In Arlington

Charles Glen Haas, of Battle Creek, Mich., has been appointed sistant superintendent of Arlington County Schools and director of the instruction program, School Superintendent William A. Early announced yesterday.

Haas' appointment came after a 10 months' search to fill the instruction director post, set up by the state of Virginia, which will pay a fourth of Haas' salary.

The educator, 35, is the third assistant superintendent of schools to be chosen. Others now serving are Charles Walsh, in charge of personnel, and Dr. Edward J. Braun, in charge of business management and construction. Haas will take office on July 1, Early said.

A native of Denver, Colo., Haas received his AB degree at the University of Denver, his MA at Stanford University, California, and has done some work on a doctorate in education at Columbia University, New York.

He served in the Army for four years, first in public relations, and later as administrative officer

Bolivia Sets Up Emergency Rule In Teacher Strike

La Paz, Bolivia, May 15 (AP).—The government declared a national emergency, a modified form of martial law, today in an effort to suppress a general teachers' strike.

The decree said the government considers the strike a subversive move by elements with Communist affiliation. The government said the walkout was contrary to the labor law that prohibits strikes by public employes and officials. The Communist Party was outlawed in Bolivia April 11.

The teachers have been asking an increase in salary, a bonus for teachers with families and an increase in the retirement fund.

President Signs Bill On Secrecy for Codes

President Truman yesterday signed a bill drafted as a safeguard for the secrecy of America's code messages.

The measure provides heavy penalties—a $10,000 fine or 10 years in prison—for anyone found guilty of disclosing information about the Government's cryptographic (secret code) messages.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz

House Budget Slash Expected to Go Deeper Than First Estimated

Administration officials are now convinced that the House-approved 1951 budget would slash Federal personnel deeper than we first estimated. They believe:

1. That the Taber-Thomas amendment would require most agencies to make an immediate personnel cut nearer 15 percent if it's enacted into law, and,

2. That the T-T amendment coupled with the Jensen rider limiting the filling of vacant jobs would force a total job cut close to 300,000 instead of the estimated 200,000.

Taber-Thomas would force most agencies to reduce personnel 10 percent. The Defense agencies would get a 2-percent reduction and only the medical employes of Veterans Administration and the Public Health Service are exempt from the sweeping rider.

This is the argument of officials who insist the actual cut would have to be greater than 10 percent for most agencies if T-T becomes law.

To hold the personnel cut to 10 percent, the reduction would have to be made, the employes paid off, and be off the payroll before July 1. Officials concede this would be impossible in nearly all cases since Congress isn't likely to complete action on the budget by that date.

But let's say the bill is signed into law on July 1, with the job-cutting T-T rider a part of it. The rule in Government is a 30-day notice to employes to be fired in reductions of force. At the earliest, August 1 would be the day many employes would go

However, the law requires agencies to pay fired employes their accumulated annual leave in a lump sum. The average employe has about 40 days of accumulated leave, or about two months' salary. This would mean that the average employe, in effect, would stay on the payroll for a full three months of the 1951 fiscal year, or from July 1 to September 1.

In addition, hundreds, if not thousands, of employes would appeal their discharges to Civil Service since any big-scale layoff would wipe out the jobs of many career people, veterans and nonveterans alike. The appeals and other delays would force agencies to retain many employes beyond the 30-day notice period.

All money spent by any agency on or after July 1 will come out of the 1951 budget. If an over-all cut is approved by Congress such as is proposed by Taber-Thomas, the longer the reduction is delayed the deeper it must be.

This is why, of course, many agencies are looking into the possibility of giving employes provisional layoff notices on June 1—notices that would become effective if one or the other, or both, of the House economy amendments become law.

But many officials are quick to point out that they would be stymied by such a move. Here's why: Their agencies haven't enough money to finish out the 1950 fiscal year that ends June 30. They have asked Congress for deficiency appropriations and their employes face payless paydays or payless furloughs if the deficiency bill is delayed much longer or if it's approved with sharp reductions.

In any event, most agencies don't have funds available to meet payrolls through June 30, let alone pay off accumulated annual leave to a bloc of employes who might be fired. And, besides, Congress might change its mind and call off the economy riders.

NO BARREL OF FUN—William Marshall, at Arlington Animal Hospital, does his best to clean up two cocker spaniels found yesterday in a barrel of tar near Shirley Highway at the Duke st. overpass. Passing motorists had to pry them from the barrel, but that was just the beginning of the long pull. An Animal Rescue League worker had to haul them out of a honeysuckle patch they went to wallow in. One had to be pried from the floor of the rescue truck, and the hospital pulled the tar from both. No one knows the dogs' owner or how they came by their tar bath

Grill Fire Case

'Tex' Baker Arson Retrial Starts Here

The retrial of Richard R. Baker, 47, on charges of setting fire to Tex's Grill, 1361 H st. ne., opened yesterday in District Court before a jury of 8 men and 4 women.

Baker is accused of setting fire to the grill July 5, 1949, to collect the insurance. Damage was estimated at $5000.

The first trial resulted in a mistrial March 10 in District Court, when one of the jurors said he did not think Baker guilty after the jury foreman had announced a guilty verdict.

The two arson charges were brought against Baker several days after the fire, when William P. Corley, 20, night manager of the grill, told police he set fire to the restaurant at Baker's instigation.

Both Corley and a friend, Charles M. Thorne, 24, of 1612 U st. se., later pleaded guilty to complicity in setting the fire. They have not yet been sentenced.

Veteran Says He Was Beaten In Late Club

A former Quantico Marine yesterday testified he became a member of the Stagecrafters Club "in a matter of two minutes" last January, then was beaten up twice in the club during the same evening.

Clyde Swann of Birmingham, Ala., testified at the District Court trial, in which the Government seeks to dissolve the charter of the after-hours club.

The night spot at 433 3d st. nw. is chartered as a "charitable" organization

Swann said he presented himself at the door, a complete stranger, and was admitted when he bought a 30-day trial membership.

Earlier in the jury trial, Edward P. "Patsy" Meserole, one of the club founders, testified the club was a charitable organization, because:

1. The club bought a number of burial plots for its members. "We never used them," he admitted, "because nobody died."

2. The club once produced a play, "The Drunkard." It flopped, Meserole said.

3. About 20 members bought insurance policies sold to them by the club.

4. The club once spent "about $600" to start a neighborhood football team for children.

The trial continues today before Judge F. Dickinson Letts.

Five Roll Calls In House Stall Parkway Bill

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A bad case of diminishing returns tied up the Washington-Baltimore Parkway bill in the House yesterday.

The returns that diminished were those of House members coming back time after time to answer roll calls. These were part of a filibuster-protesting House leadership programming of this week's business. The fifth roll call showed but four members more than the 217 that make a quorum.

Then, rather than risk disappearance of their quorum, leaders called off further action on the parkway bill until Thursday at the earliest.

Two of yesterday's roll calls showed results that virtually assure passage of the bill. One vote, 194 to 32, approved the "rule" opening the bill to House debate. The second, 192 to 29, converted the House to a "committee of the whole" to debate the bill.

The bill calls for Federal construction of the parkway from a point in northeast Washington to a point near Fort Meade, Md., about 19 miles away. There it would link with a 12-mile stretch being built by Maryland to Baltimore. The bill authorizes an appropriation of Federal funds for the parkway to Fort Meade of up to 13 million.

Representatives Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.), George H. Fallon (D., Md.) and J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.) urged the House to approve the bill. They were backed by the two top members of the House Public Works Committee which unanimously indorsed the bill—Chairman William H. Whittington (D., Miss.) and George H. Dondero (R., Mich.), ranking minority member.

Besides snagging on quorum calls, the bill ran into sharp objection from Representative Earl Wilson (R., Ind.), who said "this smells like pork to me."

Wilson called it a highway designed to serve the racetracks of Laurel and Pimlico and "to help elect people to high office in Maryland."

Other protests hit the bill in debate. Representative Karl Stefan (R., Neb.) and Representative H. Carl Andersen (R., Minn.) wanted to know why the parkway is not covered by the Federal highway aid program, where the Federal contribution is 50 percent. Representative Fallon said if that plan were followed, Maryland would route the parkway on a route different than now planned, to serve more areas of direct benefits to the State, rather than the five Federal reservations through which the existing route goes.

Two Officers Rescue Invalid From Burning Northeast Home

Two District policemen yesterday were credited with rescuing an invalid and two others from a burning home at 68 Fenton st. ne.

The men, Pvts. Joseph Longo and Joseph McCarthy of the Second Precinct, were patrolling in a scout car Sunday afternoon when they heard a woman yell "fire."

Running up to the second floor of the home, they tried to enter a middle room, whose door was blocked by a bed. Finally forcing their way in, the policemen found James Bowright, 35, and his wife, Gertrude, 32, unconscious on the floor, apparently overcome by smoke. They carried Bowright and his wife downstairs, where they quickly revived, police said.

McCarthy then called the Fire Department, while Longo ran into the rear yard and discovered another person trapped in the second floor rear room.

Longo climbed to a low roof, pulled loose a window box nailed to the sill, and was boosted into the room to take Frances May Newton, 67, an invalid, to safety.

None required hospitalization. Police said the fire apparently started when a kerosene stove overturned.

Rent Boost Ordered at Parkfairfax

1685 Units Affected By 10.5% Increase July 1st Under Virginia Decontrol

Parkfairfax, second largest apartment development in nearby Virginia, yesterday disclosed an average 10.5 percent rent increase will be put in effect July 1.

The action was interpreted as the first significant indication locally of the effect of rent decontrol adopted by the Virginia State Legislature. The decontrol period begins June 25.

Parkfairfax is a Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. property of 1685 units located along Shirley hwy. in Alexandria.

The development manager, T. C. Campbell, said the rent increases vary from $5 to $12 a month in an attempt to equalize rents for similarly sized and located apartments in the development.

He said the increase was essential because operating expenses "of all kinds" and taxes have risen "tremendously while the poor landlord just stood still on rents."

A check of five other large developments in northern Virginia showed three were still considering what to do when the controls go off, while two plan no change.

Spokesmen for Fairlington, Buckingham and Barcroft said the matter is under consideration, while Colonial and Arlington Village developments repeated an earlier statement that no increases are contemplated.

Controls Not Needed In D. C., Committee Says

Rent control is no longer needed in the District, a committee of Washington real estate groups declared yesterday, pointing to an unprecedented boom in area housing construction.

The statement was made by the joint committee for decontrol of D. C. rents, which retained Rufus S. Lusk, local real estate consultant and analyst, to survey housing conditions in Greater Washington.

Lusk made a similar study for the Alexandria-Arlington-Fairfax Real Estate Board. This was placed before the Virginia State Legislature in urging rent decontrol.

The District controls go off June 30 and Rent Administrator Robert C. Cogswell has urged extension.

The joint committee for decontrol declared that since 1940, 169,000 dwelling units have been built in metropolitan Washington, sufficient housing for 608,000 persons.

The committee said the Washington area "has outbuilt all other major tmetropolitan areas in the country." Since 1946 "enough rental housing has been built here to take care of practically all the population increase in the 1940-49 period."

The committee chairman, Oliver Walker, president of the Washington Real Estate Board, declared:

"In the face of the figures resulting from the survey, it is ridiculous for anyone to contend that there is any need for continuing rent control in the District."

Amputee Loses Damage Suit Against Firm

The United States Court of Appeals yesterday ruled with "regret" that a 22-year-old amputee, who lost both his legs in a streetcar barn accident two years ago, cannot sue the Capital Transit Co. for damages.

Three judges described their decision as a "most regrettable conclusion."

Charles G. Keffer, 22, was pinned to a brick wall in the car barn at 8th and M sts. ne., in June, 1948, by an empty car which was rammed from behind by another car. Keffer suffered a fractured pelvis and a ruptured bladder and both legs had to be amputated 3 inches from the groin.

The court ruled that Keffer's suit for $300,000 damages "is cut off by . . . the applicable Workmen's Compensation law in the District which provides exclusive liability for the employer in all cases coming under the provisions of the act."

Keffer has been awarded the maximum compensation possible under the act in effect June 21—$25 a week until he has received $7500, the court said.

If the accident had occurred 72 hours later, the decision noted, when the law was changed, Keffer would have received $25 a week for life.

Judge Bennett Champ Clark wrote the decision, with Judges Henry W. Edgerton and George T. Washington concurring.

Heavy Rains Flood D. C., County Basements; Home and Building Damaged by Lightning

By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

RUB-A-DUB-DUB—Two kids in a tub are Larry, 3, and Peg, 4, children of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Winship, 3915 47th st. nw., whose basement was flooded yesterday by heavy rains.

Scores of basements were flooded, several homes damaged by lightning, and a number of fire alarms resulted from a severe thunderstorm and a series of showers that brought 1.27 inches of rain here yesterday. No one was reported injured.

A cooperating weather observer at Tokoma Park said his instruments recorded total rainfall of 2.25 inches between 12:01 a. m. and 7 p. m., yesterday. He said Sligo Creek in the Takoma Park area overran its banks and spread some floodwater.

The Weather Bureau said the skies will clear today, with the sun visible most of the time and a high of about 75 degrees.

The storm here was part of general rains, reported beneficial to crops through Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and parts of Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The downpour brought more than a score of calls to authorities in the District and about the same number in Arlington for flooded basements. The District Fire Department pumped out some of the flood waters, and the sewer division answered other calls here.

Lightning knocked some roof slate and a chimney from the home of E. C. Iselin, at 4705 S. 29th st., Fairlington, and knocked some bricks from the gable end of a building in the 800 block of Martha Custis dr., Parkfairfax. Lights went out momentarily in downtown Alexandria.

At 12:30 p. m. fire alarms were received from two separate apartments in a building at 108 I st. nw. Police reported the small blazes were caused by short circuits in electrical equipment caused by leaking rain water. Lightning struck the home of Mrs. Keith Jaquiss at 4331 44th st. nw., and burned off the telephone wire into the building and caused other minor damage.

Police were called to an excavation at 2511 Wisconsin ave. nw. to place barricades and lights. They said water had caused an extensive cave-in, including some of the sidewalk, where a hole had been dug for plumbing work.

In Chevy Chase and Silver Spring several flooded basements were reported. Lightning blew out fuses at a veterans housing development on Booker T rd., near Grubb rd., in Silver Spring. Prince Georges County authorities reported some flooded basements and highways covered with some water for a short time.

Two Bandits Rob Finance Firm of $2300

Two armed bandits held up a finance company office about 9:30 a. m. yesterday and escaped with nearly $2300 in cash and a number of nonnegotiable checks.

Victim was Irving Rosenberg, owner of Economy Finance Co., 1430 Florida ave. ne.

He was in the office talking with an employe and a former employe when the first bandit entered through a side door. The other came in a front door immediately afterward. Both wore sun glasses with large, false, rubber noses attached, light sport caps and sport jackets, giving the appearance of twins.

Rosenberg said he believed momentarily he was the victim of a joke until he saw the guns and the first bandit pushed Emmett Langley, the former employe, to one side. Then the bandit demanded that he open the safe.

Rosenberg told the holdup man there was no money in the safe and that it was open, but was so startled, he said, he produced $1503 from his pocket, money from the Kenyon Motor Co., which he also owns.

The second bandit then held Rosenberg, Langley, and William A. Mahoney, 20, an empoye, of 780 Coumbia rd. nw., behind a counter while the first one went through the safe. It yielded $474.78 in a bank deposit Rosenberg had just made up and $300 in petty cash. The men escaped in a green pickup truck.

Police said the truck belongs to Henry Leisch, 5118 3d st. nw., and was stolen Sunday from a lot at Bladensburg rd. and Neal st. ne.

Both bandits were described by police as white men, about 30 years old; dark complexions; 5 feet 8 inches tall; weighing 160 to 170 pounds, and wearing "twin" disguises of sun glasses and false noses, and similar caps and jackets.

The holdup yesterday is the second one recently in which rubber false noses served as a disguise. A bandit used a false nose March 13 in holding up the Plaza Hotel, 331 1st st. ne., but he has since been arrested.

Two Eastern High School football players reported to police they were held up Sunday night in Fort Dupont Park by two armed men. They are Arnold Rollman, 18, of 1522 Neal st. ne., and Spencer Lampins, 17, of 1411 Morse st. ne. They said they lost nothing.

Two Youths Confess to Car Breaks

Mount Rainier police said yesterday that the two teen-age boys they picked up Sunday night have admitted 15 cases of petty thievery from automobiles.

Those arrested are Edward E. Boswell, 18, whose address is listed at 3608 39th ave., Colmar Manor, Md., and a 16-year-old Washington youth.

Police picked up the two boys at about 9 p. m. Sunday night in Kaywood Gardens, where they said they found them tampering with an automobile. Following police receipt of a stolen car report, police said the youths admitted stealing the car, and also admitted the 15 petty theft cases.

Late yesterday afternoon, police said they also admitted breaking and entering the Cameo Theater in Mount Rainier last February.

Specific charges against Boswell are larceny of a motor vehicle; petty larceny; tampering with a motor vehicle, and breaking and entering. He is under $1200 bond for appearance May 25 in Hyattsville Police Court. The Washington juvenile also is under detention and will be given a juvenile hearing on May 18.

Laddie Owens Gets 4 Years for 6 Thefts

Laddie Dwight Owens, 20, yesterday was sentenced to serve four years in the Virginia State Penitentiary following his conviction on six larceny counts before Arlington Circuit Court Judge Walter T. McCarthy.

Owens was arrested early in April after the theft of about $200 worth of tools from Bladen's Esso Station, 633 N. Glebe rd. He was indicted on eleven counts of larceny but he was tried on only six counts.

Owens gave his address to police as 3807 College lane, Arlington.

3-Car Crash Kills Man; Nine Hurt in Area

One man was killed and nine persons were injured yesterday in traffic accidents in Washington and nearby Maryland.

Randolph Noblin, 33, of Newport News, Va., was killed early yesterday when the car he was riding in collided with two other cars on Route 1 at Contee rd., 2 miles south of Laurel, Md. Noblin was pronounced dead of a fractured skull at the scene.

State Police said Noblin was a passenger in an auto driven by Seth G. Nelson, 35, also of Newport News. Nelson's car, they said, skidded into cars driven by Ralph E. Baker, 29, of Laurel and Eldridge A. Jenkins, 31, of Baltimore.

Noblin was thrown from the car.

In Washington, John Moody, 49, of 1016 Massachusetts ave. nw., was injured seriously when he was struck by a car near 912 Massachusetts ave. nw. at 8:05 p. m.

Police charged the driver, John M. Aldridge, 49, of 1421 P st. nw., with driving at an unreasonable speed. Moody was in serious condition at Emergency Hospital with compound fractures of the legs and forhead cuts.

Two Andrews Air Force Base men were injured—one seriously—early yesterday when their convertible skidded on a curve on Marlboro pike near Hillside, Md.

Passersby extricated Sergt. A. J. Howell, 28, of the 1050th Air police Squadron, and Corpl. Arba C. Sullivan, 24, of the 1050th Base Flight Squadron.

Both were taken to Walter Reed Hospital by the District Heights Rescue Squad.

Washington Police Pvt. Verilia D. Sponaugle and his wife, Elizabeth, both 41, of 1622 18th st. se., were injured when their car was struck by an auto at Potomac and Kentucky aves. se. about 7:30 p. m.

Police charged the driver of the car, Edward Rustic, 27, a Marine stationed at the Washington barracks, with passing a stop sign and failure to obtain District tags.

Man, 21, Admits 10 Recent Cabbie Holdups, Police Say

A 21-year-old busboy yesterday confessed six recent cab driver robberies in Washington and four others in nearby Maryland, police announced.

The man, James Lee Hedgepeth, 1120 6th st. se., was ordered held for grand jury action by U. S. Commissioner Cyril S. Lawrence who set $45,000 bond. Police placed three charges of robbery and three of committing a crime of violence while armed against Hedgepeth.

He was arrested yesterday morning while at work in a lunch room in the 700 block of N. Capitol st. by Precinct Detectives Thomas T. Barbour and Morris A. Lewis of the Fourteenth Precinct.

The detectives said Hedgepeth readily admitted the holdups and took them to his room where he turned over a revolver. They said he told them his wife bore an infant son recently and "went down in the country for a while." As she was gone, he told police, he "got lonesome" and robbed the drivers as a result.

All the robberies, police said, followed the same pattern.

A cab would be hailed downtown and the driver ordered to the Anacostia area or nearby Chapel Oaks, Md., where he would be held up. Police said Hedgepeth had lived in that neighborhood most of his life.

Police estimated the loot totaled less than $100.

Wife Missing, Despondent Father of 6 Shoots Self

Mrs. Cobb Vanished May 4; Husband Goes to Hospital in Critical Condition

Jesse J. Cobb, 52-year-old Washington butcher whose wife has been missing since May 4, shot and critically wounded himself in his Accokeek, Md., home yesterday.

Maryland State Police said he was despondent over his wife's disappearance.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Middleton, neighbors of Cobb, said they saw him stagger along a road fronting their homes about 1 p. m. Middleton drove Cobb to Physicians Memorial Hospital in La Plata, Md. After emergency treatment, Cobb was transferred to Providence Hospital here.

State police said Cobb—father of six children—propped the butt of a borrowed shotgun against a kitchen wall. Then using his right hand to support the muzzle against his left breast, he used a stick in his left hand to push the trigger. The right arm intercepted most of the shot, they said.

Providence Hospital aides said Cobb was in "very critical condition," with wounds in his chest and arms. He was in the operating room more than an hour, they said.

"Too Much for Me"

Mrs. Middleton said Cobb told her he shot himself "because my wife is gone and it's too much for me."

State police at La Plata said the graying butcher also left a note addressed to his wife, 32-year-old Mrs. Hallie Mae Cobb. They said it asked her forgiveness, mentioned financial difficulties, pleaded for "God to help me," and declared that he could not go on without his wife. They would not release the text of the note.

Since their mother disappeared, the Cobbs' six youngsters have been living at the home of Cobb's sister-in-law, Mrs. Earl Fulks, near Accokeek.

Sunday night Cobb took the children back home with him, but returned with them yesterday morning, Mrs. Fulks said. Soon after he left she noticed a shotgun missing.

Mrs. Fulks told police she ran to her brother-in-law's home to investigate, but got there only to learn that Cobb had already used the weapon on himself.

It was Mrs. Fulks who went to Berkeley Springs, W. Va., last week to see if it was her missing sister-in-law who was murdered near the West Virginia community. Mrs. Fulks said it was not.

Triplets, Mother Well But Father Ponders at Home

Mother and triplets were reported doing well yesterday but the father—well, he was home minding the four other children and worrying about the bills.

The triplets, two girls and a boy, were born Saturday at Montgomery County General Hospital, Sandy Spring, Md., to Mrs. Richard F. Dale, 33, of Cloppers, Md. The hospital had to send the trio to Children's Hospital here because the multiple arrival put too much of a load on the incubator supply at Montgomery.

The husband is 42 and a mechanic at the Handley Motor Co., 3730 Georgia ave. nw. The babies weighed in at 2½ to 3½ pounds and were reported doing well at Children's yesterday.

The mother had expected one and possibly two children. So did the doctor. The triplets surprised them all.

Planners Warned Of Parking Needs

To D. C. Board

Citizens Ask That Schwab Be Renamed

Reappointment of James E. Schwab, vice chairman of the District Recreation Board whose term runs out May 29, was asked last night by the Fort Davis Citizens Association.

In a meeting at the Ryland Methodist Church, the group voted to ask the Public Utilities Commission to start a survey of public transportation facilities east of the Anacostia River.

Mrs. Edward B. Morris, association president, said her group felt that bus lines in the area might be coordinated better. More through service around Barney Circle was also desired, she said.

The group also voted to oppose a proposed change in the zoning regulations to permit a temporary parking lot to operate at Branch and Pennsylvania aves. se.

Mrs. Morris was reelected president for another year. Also reelected were Sebastian Riccobono, first vice president; John Mako, second vice president; Mrs. Homer R. Baker, secretary; and Mrs. James F. Baxter, treasurer.

The association announced plans for its third annual picnic June 3.

Lincoln Park

Levy R. Tindal was named to a third term as president of the Lincoln Park Citizens Association last night at the group's final meeting until September 18.

J. Watson Flannagan was reelected vice president; Miss Olive V. DeCatur, secretary; Levi V. Cox, treasurer; and C. C. Clem and G. Leslie Schafer, delegates to the Federation of Citizens Associations.

The association also favored reappointment of James E. Schwab to the District Recreation Board and restoration of the House's 10 percent cut in the $12 million payment toward District expenses.

The meeting was in the Epworth Methodist Church, Carolina ave. and 13th st. ne.

Capitol View

Opposition to the reappointment of James E. Schwab to the District Recreation Board and to the bill which would turn over control of D. C. recreation facilities to the board was voiced by the Capitol View Civic Association last night.

Off-street parking has reached the point where, like the weather, everyone talks about it and no one does anything much about it, Kenneth Knapp, Rochester, N. Y., city engineer, said last night.

Knapp, one of four speakers in a panel discussion of the downtown districts of cities at the National Citizens Conference on Planning for City, State and Nation, said, "unless something is done about off-street parking, we will face the decentralization of our most valuable property."

Knapp told the planners, meeting at the Hotel Statler, that it was the "responsibility of both the city government and property owners to privide off-street parking because it protects the interests of both."

Walter S. Schmidt, of Cincinnati, past president of the Urban Land Institute, said that a survey of 10 large cities showed the central district of one paid 38 percent of the city's taxes; another paid only 20 percent, while a third paid 50 percent. These central areas, Schmidt said, occupied about 200 acres in cities averaging 100 square miles each.

"When you dencentralize, you don't get the same taxes, because land values are not as high," Schmidt said.

Prof. Theodore M. Matson, director of the Yale University bureau of highway traffic, said "we will never solve the parking problem at the curb. It is a delusion and the sooner we forget it the better. We are faced with increased stringency of curb regulation in the future."

A somewhat different point of view was suggested by Howard T. Fisher, of Chicago, who said there was approximately one car for every five Americans and "parking meters were a confession of defeat."

After declaring that "off-street parking must be provided, even if it means tearing down buildings," Fisher said, "as for on-street parking, we need more, not less."

He suggested that wide sidewalks be narrowed to provide more room in the street, and that all but traffic local to the neighborhood be eliminated.

Earlier, in a discussion of metropolitan planning, Prof. Myres McDougal, member of the Yale University law school faculty and co-author of "The Case for Regional Planning, with Special Reference to New England," said planners were at fault in not keeping legislators and the public better informed on the need for planning.

The six-day conference will conclude Wednesday.

Rollicking Time Is Had by All As Boys Clubs Convene Here

By S. L. Fishbein
Post Reporter

An unconventional convention convened with fanfare at the Shoreham Hotel yesterday.

Five hundred delegates of the Boys Clubs of America popped into town equipped with their own circus.

For two hours the Shoreham ballroom rocked to the rhythm of roaring Indian dancers, cavorting clowns, caged animals, tumblers, cowboy lariat artists, whooping firemen and willowy harem dancers.

The whoop-de-o was put on by 100 boys of the Boys Club of Baltimore reinforced by a few girls.

And Circus Music, Too

Staged by Major Douglas Eldredge, executive director of the Baltimore clubs, the circus was a demonstration of what could be done in combining wood working, crafts, dramatics and music in a club program.

Brassy circus music was supplied by the Boys Club of Washington concert band.

What has been done in the boys club movement was described at last night's dinner by David W. Armstrong, national director of the Boys Clubs of America.

From its rude founding in 1906 when buildings were few and clubs used husky bouncers, Armstrong said the national organization has mushroomed to where its assets total more than 41 million dollars.

During the dinner, bronze Keystone Awards for outstanding service to boys were presented to George W. Casey, executive secretary of the Big Brother Boys Club, Philadelphia, Pa.; Jacob M. Burnes, executive director of West End House, Boston, Mass.; James E. Keegan, of the Boys Club of Pittsfield, Mass.; and Albert B. Hines, executive director of Madison Square Boys Club, New York, N. Y.

Winners Announced

Winners of 11 national contests and competitions, in which 44,526 boys took part also were announced. David Russo, 14, of San Francisco, Calif., received the Junior Citizenship, "Boy of the Year" award.

A gold Keystone Award for extraordinary service of national significance will be given to FBI director J. Edgar Hoover at the convention dinner Thursday night. Herbert Hoover, chairman of the board of directors of the Boys Clubs of America, will be the speaker.

Featured today will be a Crafts County Fair in the main ballroom from 2 to 3:30 p. m. Other subjects to be discussed include game rooms, camping and aquatics, health education, vocational guidance and libraries. The American Boys Club Associates will hold their fourth annual meeting at 4 p. m.

Dehydrated Pea Soup Developed for Troops

The Army announced yesterday that it has developed a new type of dehydrated pea soup for field soldiers. It said the soup can be prepared by heating water in a canteen cup, pouring in the soup mix and stirring it for a few moments.

Tyler Indicted In Slayings At Lansburgh's

William A. Tyler, jr., 18, of 2302 Pomeroy st. ne., yesterday was indicted by the District grand jury for the slaying of two Lansburgh and Bro. department store guards.

The two men, Oliver R. Hess, 57, and John C. Carpenter, 67, were stabbed to death while on duty in the store early on the morning of April 7.

Tyler, who was arrested a month later for assault on a pharmacist, broke down and confessed to the double slaying after starting to undergo a lie detector test at police headquarters.

The indictment charged him with two counts of first degree murder and two counts of housebreaking with intent to steal and committing murder while perpetrating the housebreaking.

Also indicted yesterday for the hold-up of Emmett R. Warring, local gambler, were Sidney Stromberg, Malcolm Epstein and Arthur Pelkisson. They were charged with two counts each of robbery and two counts each of assault with a dangerous weapon.

Police said they entered Warring's home at 3900 Macomb st. nw. on January 9, struck his brother-in-law, William P. Cady, with a gun and robbed Cady of $900 in cash and a $10 wrist watch.

They then waited around until Warring came home and at gun point robbed him of $21,500 in cash and a $5000 ring, police said.

Stromberg, 32, is being held on a murder charge at Pottsville, Pa. Epstein, 40, is held in Pittsburgh on 18 charges of armed robbery, holdup and larceny. Pelkisson, 38, is held in New York City for a series of holdups.

Also among the 24 indictments returned yesterday by the District grand jury were:

An indictment charging Harry Lee, 44, with 12 counts of the purchase, sale and possession of narcotics. Lee was one of 7 persons arrested on dope charges April 22 in the roundup of a $200,000-a-year narcotics ring here.

Frederick R. Murdock, jr., 27, of 1336 Missouri ave. nw., and Jacob S. Farmer, 28, of 212 Wayne st. se., allegedly co-owners of a pool hall at 937 9th st. nw., were indicted on charges of setting up a gaming table, operating a lottery and possession of numbers slips.

Brazil's Ambassador Is Brazil-Bound, Indiana Version'

By Marie McNair and Elizabeth Maguire

THE Brazilian Ambassador, Mauricio Nabuco, has left for Brazil—Indiana, that is.

Accompanied by his sister, Miss Carolina Nabuco, and Lauro Escorel de Moraes, Third Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy, Ambassador Nabuco will stop in the Indiana town on his way to the West Coast. In Brazil the Mayor, who has long awaited this visit, will entertain at a reception for the Ambassador and present the key to the city to him.

The trip West is being made by plane because of the train strike. First stop will be in Indianapolis, where Ambassador Nabuco will be entertained at dinner by the Committee on Foreign Affairs and will speak to the group.

In St. Louis the visitors will attend a two-day panel discussion of Brazilian affairs with teachers and students of Washington University. There will also be a dinner given by the Council on World Affairs, with speeches afterward.

Arriving in Los Angeles about May 24, the Ambassador will first attend the International Harbor Day celebration, then go to San Francisco for an address to the Commonwealth Club on May 26. The following day he will be guest of honor of Dr. Wallace Sterling, president of Stanford University, at a reception, and the next two days will be taken up with the Stanford Conference on Brazilian Affairs. Joao Baptisto Pinheiro, Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy, will accompany Ambassador and Miss Nabuco on the latter half of the trip.

For Miss Nabuco, highlight of the journey will be on May 29 at Stanford, when she is to be presented with the English translation of her book, "Life of Joaquim Nabuco." Dr. Ronald Hilton, director of Latin American Studies at Stanford, is the translator. An authoritative text for serious students of Brazilian history, the book will be the subject of a talk by its author at the formal presentation ceremony.

From there he will go to Holland and Detroit, Mich., and lastly to New York, whence he will sail for home on May 25 or 26.

Colombian Embassy Scene of Dinner

A DINNER was given last evening by the Colombian Ambassador and Senora de Zuleta-Angel at the embassy. The assistant to the President and Mrs. John R. Steelman, and Mr. and Mrs. Clark Clifford were among the guests. Also present were the Ambassador-at-Large of Spain, Jose Felix Lequerica, and Senora de Lequerica, former Senator and Mrs. Hiram Bingham, Mr. and Mrs. James van Allen of New York, Mrs. Bert Andrews, Dr. Diego Garces and his fiancee, Miss Nancy Saroli of New York, and embassy staff members and their wives.

Joris in 't Veld, Netherlands Minister of Housing and Reconstruction, arrived Sunday in Washington for a visit of several days. He is stopping at the Statler.

At luncheon yesterday the Minister was entertained by Senator John J. Sparkman of Alabama. The luncheon party was in the office of the secretary of the Senate, Leslie L. Biffle.

Minister Veld is leaving Wednesday for Chicago, Ill.

New Yorker Guest Of Honor at Tea

MRS. FRANK C. BAKER has arrived from New York for a short visit with Mrs. Montfort Moodie and was guest of honor at a tea yesterday given by Mrs. Moodie. Mrs. Baker is the sister of Brig. Gen. Raymond E. Lee, USN, (ret.) of Georgetown.

Taking their turn at the tea table yesterday were Mrs. Justin Miller, Mrs. Maxwell Hamilton, Mrs. Julian Gillespie, Mrs. Barnet Nover, Mrs. Brice Smith, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mrs. Ocie Heady, Mrs. James Craig Peacock, Mrs. Julien N. Friant, Mrs. Charles J. Brand, Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel and Mrs. Frederick Livesay.

Among the guests were Mrs. Harold Burton, Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Mrs. William C. Johnstone, jr., Mrs. Norman Gerstenfeld, Mrs. Philip F. Dodson, Mrs. Donald Hogate, Mrs. Clarence Streit, Mrs. Raymond Lee, Mrs. Cecil Lester Jones, Mrs. Paul Porter, Mrs. Robert F. Leonard, Mrs. Thomas C. Blaisdell, jr., and Mrs. James V. Bennett.

Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Wayne Morse and Mrs. Walt Horan were honor guests at the weekly fashion show luncheon held yesterday at the Statler Hotel. The Embassy Room was camouflaged as a "Big Top," replete with clowns, crackerjacks, balloons, billboards, barkers, and sideshows.

Six-Foot Cake Due to Be Cut

BEATRICE LODGE, daughter of Representative and Mrs. John Davis Lodge, will cut a six-foot birthday cake at noon today right on the sidewalk in front of the Playhouse theater. It's a birthday cake for Connecticut-born Margaret Sullavan of the movies, whose "No Sad Songs For Me" opens at the Playhouse on Wednesday.

Cake and cola will be distributed to all who attend the birthday fete. First pieces of the cake will go to the children of Washington newspaper correspondents from Connecticut. They are Gail and Barry Cronan, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Carey Cronan; Carol Tulley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Tully, and Patsy Butler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Butler.

Tarchianis Entertain For Mayor of Rome

THE AMBASSADOR of Italy and Signora Tarchiani entertained yesterday for the Mayor of Rome, Salvatore Rebecchini, and Signora Rebecchini. Other guests were Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Russell Young, and Monsignor Luigi Dadaglio of the Apostolic delegation.

A dinner will be given at the Apostolic delegation on Wednesday in honor of the Mayor and Signora Rebecchini.

Miss Torlinski To Be June Bride

The engagement of their daughter, Miss Eunice Ames Torlinski, to Robert Edward O'Rourke, has been announced by Capt. Michael J. Torlinski, USNR, ret., and Mrs. Torlinski of Chevy Chase. Mr. O'Rourke is the son of Mrs. Charles E. O'Rourke and the late Professor O'Rourke of Ithaca, N. Y.

The bride-elect was graduated from Cornell University, where she was a member of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority. Mr. O'Rourke will be graduated in June from the Mechanical Engineering School of Cornell University. He is a member of Beta Theta Pi Fraternity and Sphinx Head, senior honorary society. During the war he served as a B-26 pilot with the Ninth Air Force in Europe.

The date for the wedding has been set for June 17.

Barbara Boulware, Ross Camp to Wed

Mr. and Mrs. Hardin Boulware of Champaign, Ill., announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Miss Barbara Ann Boulware, to Ross Mattis Camp, son of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Thomas James Camp of Washington.

Miss Boulware was graduated from the University of Illinois.

Mr. Camp attended St. Albans School and the Episcopal High School, and is also a graduate of the University of Illinois.

He has recently opened an office for the Doane Agricultural Service in Ottumwa, Iowa.

Diane Mowrer To Be Bride

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Ansel Mowrer announce the engagement of their daughter, Diane Jane, to Jean Beliard of Colmar and Paris, France.

Miss Mowrer was educated in Europe and graduated from Radcliffe in 1944. She is now in the information section of ECA in Paris.

M. Beliard was graduated from the Ecole des Sciences Politiques in Paris. He was decorated for his work in the resistance movement and is now attached to the Quai d'Orsay. The wedding will take place shortly in Paris. Mrs. Mowrer will leave today by plane to attend the wedding.

Britons Confident Campbell Tells Democratic Club

The people in Britain are confident that Britain will have a future as great as her past, according to Charles H. Campbell, director of the Washington office of the British Information Services. He spoke yesterday at the luncheon meeting of the Women's National Democratic Club.

Mr. Campbell, newly returned from a trip to England, said that the young people there are not afraid. The children of Britain have never been so healthy, nor the people so confident, he said.

Discussing Britain's economic problems, Mr. Campbell said that Marie Antoinette's "Let 'em eat cake" remark was pertinent. "If the people in the United States do not eat cake, the people elsewhere cannot eat bread," since American importation of luxury items from abroad helps the other countries to float their economies, he pointed out.

About Britain's nationalized health program, Mr. Campbell said that it definitely was not an export item. It has been a success there, he said, but would not necessarily be a success here.

Mrs. Fred W. Morrison, president of the club, presided at the luncheon meeting which was held at Women's National Democratic Club headquarters. Miss Florence Taaffe introduced the speaker.

Prospective Chicago Visitor Told Sometimes the June Weather Man Blows Hot and Again Blows Cold

DEAR ANNE:
I am planning to be in Chicago during the second or third week in June. Will spring suits be appropriate to wear or will the weather be too warm for them? Pearl G., Washington.

The climate in Chicago is strikingly variable. It even snowed there once on July 4, I hear. On the other hand, it can also be hot as blazes in the summertime. It's advisable to take along your suit, and a spring coat, too. Pack several summer dresses in your bag, as well as accessories that will go with either the suit or the dresses.

DEAR ANNE:
Sometime last summer, I believe you mentioned a way of treating or painting window screens so that one could see out but passersby could not see in. Is there such a paint or treatment for screens? And where can you buy it? We would like to keep the windows up but still have some privacy.
C. K., Washington.

If screening is painted with light gray enamel, it will give you much more privacy. Passersby cannot see in clearly during daylight hours, but your view out will not be impeded. Aluminum paint is also used for this purpose. Be careful not to fill the meshes. Use paint sparingly or open filled meshes with dry brush after painting.

PETUNIA!

I love to have my friends in
For Sunday night buffets
(It's simple when you're well equipped
With handy little trays!)

Yes, and it's simpler for the guests too, Petunia . . . no juggling and spilling.

Bishop-Bracken.

DEAR ANNE:
Please publish recipe for so-called "Roquefort Cheese Dip." It is used with raw cauliflower flowerettes. Have enjoyed the combination as an appetizer.
E. A. J., Washington.

ROQUEFORT DIP:
Ingredients:

One 1½-ounce portion Roquefort or Blue Cheese; 3-ounce package cream cheese; ½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce; mayonnaise or salad dressing.

Blend the Roquefort or Blue cheese with the cream cheese. Add enough mayonnaise or salad dressing to make mixture of almost whipped cream consistency. Add Worcestershire sauce. A little onion juice can be added for seasoning, too, if desired.

Choosing Friends

I do not choose my friendships by . . . How wealthy they may be . . . But only by what they can do . . . To serve and comfort me . . . The willingness of friendly hearts . . . To hear me when I call . . . To soothe my soul and lift me up . . . Whenever I may fall . . . I may not ever need them and . . . I may not ask their aid . . . But if I do, I want to feel . . . That they will make the grade . . . That they will never let me down . . . And leave me to my plight . . . When thundershowers sweep the day . . . Or wash away the night . . . The same as I would give my all . . . When they have need of me . . . Or just to share the happiness . . . Of friendly company.

Married Four Years, Couple Finally See Way Clear to Take Belated Honeymoon Trip, But Quarrel Flares Over What to Do With Daughter

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: When George and I were married four years ago we could not afford a honeymoon, but of course that didn't bother me at the time. It was joy enough to be married to him, although he often told me that we would have a honeymoon some day when we had enough money saved.

The year after we married we had a baby, so we stopped thinking of the trip for a while. This year our daughter is 3, and just last week George told me we had enough money saved for a two weeks' vacation. I was delighted, of course. I thought of us being alone together and all sorts of happy plans came to mind. I was as happy as when I was a bride.

As soon as George left for work after giving me this news, I walked over to mother's with Janie. Mother promptly agreed to keep Janie while George and I were away, and I knew she wouldn't consider it a bother, as she dearly loves Janie, who is her only grandchild. I guess I just took for granted that George would be pleased with these arrangements, but when I told him that night he got angry. We had a terrible quarrel.

He said if we couldn't take Janie with us we couldn't go ourselves. I told him it isn't that I don't love Jane, and of course I would miss her if we left her at mother's. I only wanted to be alone with him; and I knew, too, that a long trip would tire a child her age, and the strain of this would make both of us miserable.

I realize now that I should have talked things over with George before planning with mother. But was I wrong in wishing to leave Janie with her? Is it selfish of me? Please tell me what to do. If we take Janie along on vacation I won't enjoy the trip so much; and if we don't go, neither George nor I will be happy. E. V.

Man Lost Temper, Not Knowing Why

DEAR E. V.: Looking at this dispute from the angle of real consideration for the child, I can see no constructive argument in favor of taking 3-year-old Janie on a two-weeks' trip, if her grandmother will gladly give her devoted home care in familiar surroundings, on a regular schedule, while you are away.

It is my impression that George lost his temper without knowing why, when he heard you'd made plans with your mother to leave Janie there; and that he blindly fought your purpose due simply to anger, and then began to feel he was justifiably up in arms in defense of some principle involving her.

I think the truth about his explosion is that he felt outraged by your double-quick arrangement and kicked up a storm like a child whose bag of candy has been snatched, because it struck him that you were taking the reins of the trip in your hands and sharing ground-floor plans with your mother instead of him: the VIP (very important person) who was making the big doing possible.

Wife Has Done Nothing Wrong

IT appears that his sense of slight was unwarranted, but then maybe the roots of his unreasoning dismay go deeper than this incident. Possibly there is tacit warfare all the time between him and your mother, to rule your married life, an idea that occurs to me inasmuch as she lives nearby, and your first impulse was to run to her with the vacation news, as soon as George was out of sight.

Possibly George so distrusts your mother's attitude toward him that he doesn't want his child completely subject to her influence behind his back for any length of time. And if he feels that way, and yet unable to articulate his uneasiness in convincing language, it follows that he would register uneasiness in terms of embattled anger when most disturbed.

In any case, my advice to George is to correct his mistake of being angry at you for wanting a lovers' journey alone with him. Your bridelike sentiments in that respect are a tribute he should appreciate and gallantly reciprocate, as a tonic to married love. For the rest, I'd call it good planning, not censurable selfishness, to anchor Jane with her grandma while you travel, because in so doing you spare her exposure to countless health hazards encountered by tourists in restaurants and crowds. M. H.

Novelist Addresses University Club

Signora Franco Bounous, wife of the First Secretary of the Italian Embassy, was guest speaker at the University Women's Club yesterday afternoon. A famous novelist, writing under the name Alba de Cespedes, Signora Bounous discussed "The Contemporary Italian Novel."

The Italian novelist said that she considered novels as enduring and as true to life as biographies and autobiographies.

The present generation of Italian novelists were "brought up in the darkness of dictatorship and learned under that censorship to appreciate the importance of the written word," she said.

Signora Bounous' "Della Parte di Lei," which has already been translated into 12 languages, will be published here in October by Alfred A. Knopf, Inc. The English title has not yet been selected. Translated, the Italian title means "Her Side of the Story."

Tenor Roland Hayes Enchants Appreciative Audience Here

By Paul Hume

That great artist, Roland Hayes, sang his second Washington recital of the season for an enthusiastic audience last night.

Metropolitan A.M.E. Church was alternately hushed and loud with applause as the familiar haunting tenor voice filled the auditorium. Reginald Boardman played perfect accompaniments, as always, with no music before him.

There are times in every Hayes recital when the unique combination of rare art and voice surpasses all description. It may be in the enunication of a single word, or the exquisite molding of a certain phrase—it may be the incomparable tone in Schubert or a tender line of French music.

Over and over again one realizes that here is a man and artist of such rare spirit and genius that age cannot touch his inner gift. Time will never take from Roland Hayes that which is the essence of his art, for it is not a physical but a spiritual quality.

Old English songs by Dowland, Handel and Haydn opened the program which continued with three Schubert songs from the Maid of the Mill. Repeating two French songs from his last recital here, Hayes showed how technical resources can conquer problems posed by passing years.

And in his folk songs and spirituals, there came a note that is not heard in Maynor, Anderson, or any other artist today. It was the voice of one who for more than a quarter of a century has been a prophet of musical art, not only for his people, but for all people who know and love the finest music of our day.

At the end of the recital, with no accompaniment he stood and sang "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot." It was as if we had never heard the beautiful spiritual before.

Art Dealer In Court on Tax Charge

Baltimore, May 15 (Spl.).—A Washington art dealer said he and his family received $17,000 a year from his mother although he listed her on income tax returns as a dependent, a Federal Court jury was told here today.

Benjamin S. Bell, 42-year-old president of the Washington Art Galleries & Auction Rooms, Inc., went on trial today charged with attempted evasion of $55,813 in income tax from 1943 through 1945. Bell pleaded innocent.

A special agent of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, Charles Knight, testified that when he first questioned Bell concerning returns, Bell made no mention of any gifts of money. But later, Knight said, Bell told him he and his wife each received $4000 a year from his mother and their three children each received $3000 for a period of years.

Assistant United States Attorney Norman P. Ramsey said Bell listed his mother as a dependent on the tax returns, and on one form described her as "incapable of self-support."

Ramsey told the jury in an opening statement that Bell's "net worth" was $82,218 at the end of 1942 and $201,482 at the end of 1945. The Government charges that Bell made $136,154 from 1943 through 1945, but reported only $43,699.

Bell's galleries are at 722 13th st. nw. He lives at 9707 Old Georgetown rd., Bethesda.

Production Called Best U. S. Security

Full production which results in full employment is the best security which can be obtained, Charles G. Nichols, president of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, said last night.

Nichols spoke to some 300 retailers from the District, Maryland and Virginia at a dinner meeting concluding an all-day merchandising and management conference at the University of Maryland.

The conference was sponsored jointly by the university's College of Business and Public Administration, the Retail Merchants Association of Baltimore, the Maryland Council of Retail Merchants and the Merchants and Manufacturers Association of Washington.

Nichols said the economic responsibility of the retailer points in only one direction: "We must convince the American consumer that she must buy more goods."

"Retailing, long since past the cracker barrel, general store stage, is a scientific business, which if it is to survive, can do so only on the basis of maximum efficiency in operation," he said.

He pointed out that retailing today is competitive, and that this competitiveness accounts for the high level of efficiency attained in the past two decades.

Each Fall We Spent Two Weeks in Boston

What goes on behind the scenes in resort hotels, big and little, North and South, is recounted in this second article of a series of six condensed from the current popular book, "OPEN FOR THE SEASON."

By Karl Abbott

CHAPTER TWO

Toward the last of September we'd hear the little train going down the hill with its whistle wailing farewell to the "summer season" at Father's Upland hotel in Bethlehem, N. H.

Glad as we had been to see the city folks come, we were like farmers whose harvest was in. They were our bread and butter; they left us with money in the bank, the interest on the mortgage paid, and the future assured—for another season.

Sundays in the fall I had to go to church, morning and night, because I hadn't gone much during the summer.

We had a Deacon Smithers who used to get down on one knee in the aisle at prayer meeting to pray. He was a tall, gaunt man in a long black coat who invoked the Lord in a voice loud enough to be heard by St. Peter.

Each fall we spent two weeks in Boston, buying supplies and getting a crew together for the Florida hotel which Father managed in the winter.

One morning I heard Mother say she was going to Jordan Marsh and R. H. White's. I knew what that meant.

If there was anything humiliating to me, it was dragging up miles of store aisles and revolving on countless stools while Mother talked about yard goods, trimmin's, and whether or not sheeting would shrink in the wash.

Once a clerk, trying to persuade her to buy a more expensive brand of sheets, used the wrong argument.

"These are the kind Mrs. Austin buys," he said, naming a woman who ran a larger summer resort than ours in Bethlehem.

Mother pushed them right back. "Yes, but I intend to pay for mine," she said.

But I loved to go buying with Father!

It meant going to Cobb Bates and Yurkzies and S. S. Pierce. Of course we had to try all the cookies, raisins, olives, and crystallized fruits. We sat in Bill Harding's private office while boys brought cans of peaches, plums, and pears, which they opened for us to sample, and by the time the vegetables came, all we could do was sniff.

A large box of candy was given me at Pierce's which really topped off the ceremonies, glazed my eyes, and put me in a stupor.

Today the hotel steward is mailed an itemized list and checks off what is wanted. But in the 90's buying was a ceremony with polite conversation and consultation that resembled the leisurely Chinese fashion of doing business.

It was Father's day and he reveled in it. So did I.

On one trip to Boston Father learned that he would have to stay in town longer and decided to look for rooms. After supper we walked up Columbus ave., hunting for a nice genteel boardinghouse. Father selected a neat-looking brownstone with a friendly light shining through lace-curtained doors.

I liked the vestibule because there were so many pleasant-looking people in it.

Father started chatting with the "hostess," then his face turned gray and he muttered, "Holy catfish, Emma, let's get out of here!"

He grabbed my hand and I landed on the sidewalk. When I asked what the trouble was, Mother bit her lip and Father told me to keep my mouth shut.

How was I to know we innocents from Bethlehem had stumbled into one of Boston's "nicer" houses?

My first memory of Florida is of Father running the San Juan Hotel in Orlando in the winter of 1894, the year of the "big freeze."

The season started well. In December the hotel was filled with commission merchants and citrus buyers from New York and Boston markets who were offering the local growers 50, 75 and $100,000 for the oranges on their trees.

One day about noon a chill wind blew in under a leaden sky and big raindrops scattered the red-clay dust in the street. Growers began to drift into the lobby to state nonchalantly that they had decided to accept the prices quoted an hour or so before.

The buyers hurriedly left the lunch tables and went out of doors to view the weather.

By 2 o'clock the San Juan was in an uproar. Prices had dropped to "No Sale."

Commission merchants were frantically trying to get out of options. Heated debates and fist fights flared up in the lobby. By nightfall the thermometer registered subfreezing and was still going down.

About 9 o'clock in the evening a fine-looking gray-haired man in a black frock coat and Stetson hat walked up the street in front of the hotel.

He looked at the thermometer, groaned, "Oh, my God!" and shot himself through the head.

Father had the damnedest habit of getting out of bed in the morning in his long, white linen nightshirt, clapping his black derby hat on his head, and marching bare-shanked to the window to survey the sunrise.

As he peered out of the window that morning he looked black despair in the face. The "big freeze" had killed all the citrus groves in the State.

For three days the icy winds blew over a dead world. The gloom in the San Juan Hotel was something you could feel and touch.

Then, one morning, we awoke to find the land bathed in sunshine. People stirred out of gloom and began to take stock.

This was the time to pick out the men from the boys; the fit from the unfit; the fighters from the weaklings. Many pulled up stakes and left. Others plowed up their dead trees and started anew. The wise sawed off the frozen trees at the ground and in another year new shoots 10 feet high had grown from the old roots. These were seedlings and many groves were bearing within two or three years.

George E. Mullen, 23, of 721 7th st. ne., was held for grand jury action yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court on a charge of breaking and entering the Village Clothing Store in Beltsville.

Prince Georges County Police Pvts. W. L. Baker and J. R. Hill testified they found Mullen in the store about 2 a. m. May 6 when they responded to a call that a window was open. They were forced to use tear gas to get him from the building, they said.

Bond was set at $500 by Trial Magistrate Alan Bowie.

Elath Speaks Today At Phillips Gallery

Eliahu Elath, Israel's ambassador to the U. S., will speak on "Federation and the Near East," at a meeting of the United World Federalists at 8 p. m. today in the Phillips Memorial Gallery, 1600 21st st. nw.

The meeting, which is open to the public, is the first in a series designed to point out the relationship between the aims of the federationists and the problems of the day.

Convicted Red Chiefs Denied Tour Permit

New York, May 15 (U.P.).—Federal Judge Henry W. Goddard today denied 10 U. S. Communist leaders permission to tour the country to raise money to appeal their conviction.

Eleven members of the Communist national board were convicted last year of conspiring to advocate the forcible overthrow of the Federal Government. One of them, Eugene Dennis, national secretary of the party, has been jailed on a contempt of Congress conviction.

The Confidence Is Up And the Heat's Down

By John Crosby

Two years ago, this corner devoted four columns to the operations of Kraft Theater which, at the time, was a unique tlevision show. It was the only sponsored one-hour TV show, to say nothing of being the first hour-long dramatic program. Well, a lot of water has flowed under Kraft Theater and under television since then. There are dozens of hour-long TV shows and at least six hour-long dramatic programs.

Kraft, the grand-daddy of them all, celebrated its third birthday just nine days ago with a production of "Macbeth" and this corner again investigated the Kraft operation to see what changes two years had wrought.

Well, two years have wrought quite a few. The production then was George Kaufman's and Ring Lardner's "June Moon." It was chaotic. The heat in the tiny studio was stifling. Actors "lifted red-rimmed, exhausted eyes into the pitiless glare" of 136 floodlights. One actress looked as if she were going to drop from heat exhaustion. The director was screaming like a banshee and seemed on the verge of going out of his mind. The set was a shambles of cameras, cables, dollies and technicians.

All Is Calmer

Today the confusion, the heat and the noise have departed. Perhaps the most marked change of all is an air of quiet confidence in directors, actors, cameramen and everyone else. Two years ago no one quite knew what they were doing. Today they do. Improvements in cameras have been so great that floods of white light are no longer necessary. (Even if all that light were needed, cool light has been perfected to the point where actors don't swelter.) Kraft Theater is now in NBC's Studio 8-G, which is roughly three times the size of the old studio.

The play "The Fourth Step" was a one-set job, but it was, by the standards of two years ago, huge. (It was a living room with a hall and front door at right and stairs opposite the front door.) An actor, John Shellis, was rehearsing falling down the cellar stairs, a tricky operation that he did 25 times. The final shot on the home screen took three or four seconds and only his legs were shown. But TV directors, as they have gained in experience, have become perfectionists at small details.

Five by Smith

In THREE years, Kraft has presented 159 plays. A few of the better ones are "The Copperhead," "The Vinegar Tree," "Comedy of Errors," "Wuthering Heights," "A Doll's House," "Valley Forge," "Bill of Divorcement," "Biography," "Berkeley Syuare," "The Royal Family," "Barchester Towers," "She Stoops to Conquer," "The Importance of Being Earnest;" "The First Year," "Craig's Wife" and "Therese." (Among authors, A. A. Milne leads the list. Seven of his plays have been presented.))

Kraft always has searched for original scripts, it hasn't found many. In three years only seven have been produced, but the situation is improving. Five of the seven originals, incidentally, were written by the same man, Joe Bates Smith.

Kraft first went on the air in New York City only and, if every set in the area had been tuned to it, it would have been seen on 32,000 screens. Today it's in 27 cities and its alive in 26 of them. It is available to 4,500,000 sets and an audience possibly two and a half times that figure. The producers are convinced that people look at television as a family. They've never aimed at any special group—teen-agers, women or men—a philosophy which differs sharply from radio. This philosophy has paid off well. Kraft today has "the largest regular weekly television audience of any television dramatic show"—if you believe C. E. Hooper.

Nonpolitical Campaign Statistics

Edgar H. Berry of 46 East ave., Hagerstown, Md., takes issue with Republicans who sigh because they haven't had a man in the White House for "18 long years."

Ed thinks the GOP has had more than its fair share of Presidents lately, and puts it like this:

"Suppose you had cast your first vote for Abraham Lincoln at the age of 21, back in 1860. For your next 52 years you'd have lived under only one Democratic President—Grover Cleveland.

"You'd have been 73 before another Democrat entered the White House—Woodrow Wilson. And you'd have been a ripe old 93 before Mr. Roosevelt began the present succession of Democratic Presidents."

(Note: District Liner Berry's point is well taken, but I do know whether I can go alo with him in considering Andy Johnson a Republican. Andy was known as a Jacksonian Democrat until he agreed to be Lincoln's running mate in 1864 on a "nonpartisan" ticket designed to rally support to the Union cause.)

PERSONAL NOTES

Margaret Stall, 6657 Tucker rd.: I can figure only one answer to the doggerel: "Brothers and sisters I have none, but this man's father is my father's son." If he has no brothers and sisters, "my father's son" must refer to the speaker; and if the speaker is "this man's father," then "this man" must be the speaker's son. (Or must he? I dunno. Now you've got me all confused.)

SAME DIFFERENCE

I know it's old, but I still like the story about the wife who says to her old man, "Why don't you read to me while I sew?" and he answers: "Better yet, dear, why don't you sew to me while I read?"

NO TV FOR NATS?

Clark Griffith is in many ways a wonderful guy, and I guess everybody in Washington loves the old gentleman.

But sometimes Griff's impulsive decisions are a bit hard to follow.

When night baseball was first being introduced, the Old Fox fought it tooth and nail.

But when he discovered that night ball makes the turnstiles whir, Griff had a change of heart. He began a campaign for permission to book an unlimited number of dates under the mazdas.

The result was that even in the early spring, when the nights are chilly, the Nats play most of their games at night. And some fans, understandably, stayed at home this year. They'll get their fill of baseball when the weather warms up.

But Griff took one look at the empty seats and gave forth a public statement. Television was hurting the gate receipts, and would probably be kicked out next year.

However, since reading the current issue of Broadcasting Magazine, "bible" of the industry, I suspect that the old gentleman has again been a bit hasty in formulating his opinions.

The magazine gives the result of a two-year study of attendance at sports events by owners of TV sets. And it reveals that, after the first year, when the novelty of television has worn off, attendance is at least as high—and in some cases higher—than before.

The survey is based on figures compiled from 460 baseball clubs, 192 universities, 32 high schools and 100 sports arenas; it covers 572 cities in 48 States, and is based on a record of 124 million paid admissions.

THAT'S ALL

Overheard at one of the local TV studios: "He's not a bad guy; it's just that he has a 7-inch brain and a 16-inch mouth."

SIGN OF OUR TIMES?

Harold H. Buckles of 2804 Terrace rd. se., tells me that on a crane near the MATS terminal at the airport he saw the legend: "Atomic Engineering Co." Now I won't rest until I find out whether they use the crane to hoist bombs or merely some of the larger-sized atoms.

THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Eric I. Welle, the Kennedy st. ice cream mogul, likes this bit of philosophy:

GOP Seen Loaded With Ghostwriters

By Drew Pearson

Genial GOP Chairman Guy Gabrielson now has so many statement-makers that he's had to hire a boss to control them. In fact, there are almost more ghost-writers and publicity men in and around Republican headquarters than there are potential candidates for the White House, and each ghost-writer seems to be working for his own particular dark horse.

PEARSON

Some time ago the Republicans decided to follow the lead of the late Charley Michelson, who, with astute statements written backstage for big-name Democrats, helped put across several Democratic victories.

But now there are so many high-priced GOP publicity men that Chairman Gabrielson finds himself a quarterback on a team where everyone else is calling the signals. Here is the roll call of the GOP ghost-writers and the party factions they represent:

Bob Humphreys, former INS correspondent, paid $20,000 a year by the National Committee, but actually works for former Speaker Joe Martin. With a staff of 15 at the George Washington Inn on Capitol Hill, Humphreys grinds out speeches, statements and strategy for Martin and his small crew of kingmakers in Congress.

Vic Johnston, former Harold Stassen lieutenant, paid $15,000 by the National Committee to find words for Senators. He has a staff of five. The white-haired, easy-going Johnston represents the mildly progressive GOP wing and is popular with newsmen.

Arthur Hachten, a former INS reporter, is Senator Wherry's "brain." He is paid $10,860 annually by Congress and is the man who enables Wherry to make those quick comebacks at Truman. Hachten writes 'em and Wherry speaks 'em.

Dick Guylay, one-time New York Herald Tribune newsman, now a public relations and advertising expert specializing in Republican campaigns. He is paid by Senator Robert Taft out of his own pocket.

Bill Mylander, former correspondent for the Cowles papers. He has the unhappy task of trying to coordinate all the GOP press agents. Bill gets $25,000 a year as the new GOP publicity director.

Before Mylander was appointed, Chairman Gabrielson wanted to eliminate the large word factories on Capitol Hill paid by the National Committee. But this brought such snorts of rage that Gabrielson backed down.

Note—What got Gabrielson really sore was a rumor apparently circulated by GOP ghost-writers that Gabrielson was on his way out as national chairman.

Mixed Personalities

Canadian Minister of External Affairs Lester B. (Mike) Pearson, once Ambassador to the U. S. A., picked up a cablegram the other day and showed it to friends. It was addressed:

"Hon. Drew Pearson, Secretary of State for External Affairs, Ottawa."

"Fame at last!" exclaimed Mike, who always delighted FDR with his sense of humor. He explained that the cable, which had been sent from Paris, obviously was an error.

"But, of course," he added, "It could have been 'George Drew Pearson.'" (George Drew is opposition leader in the Canadian Parliament.)

Agrarian Reformers

One of the chief proofs offered by Senator McCarthy and Louis Budenz that Owen Lattimore is a Communist is that he called the Chinese Communists "agrarian reformers" and got other writers to do the same. Thus they deceived the American public and the State Department.

However, careful research into the writings of American experts on China now reveals that it was not Lattimore who called the Communists "agrarian reformers," but a high-ranking Republican—none other than Patrick J. Hurley.

Hurley, who was Secretary of War in Hoover's Cabinet, GOP candidate for Senator from New Mexico, and United States Ambassador to China, has been held up by the McCarthy group as the man who was dead right about the Chinese Communists, and whose work Lattimore was trying to undermine. Yet on returning from his ambassadorial post in China, Hurley, speaking before the National Press Club on November 29, 1945, was quoted in The Washington Post as follows:

"In discussing the Chinese Communists, Hurley said there might be some among them who look to Moscow for guidance, but he thought most of them were just reformers—outs who wanted to be the ins.

"'The only difference between Chinese Communists and Oklahoma Republicans,' he said, grinning, 'is that the Oklahoma Republicans are not armed.'"

Note 1—In the same speech, Hurley blasted the State Department, and having already resigned, he could hardly have been reflecting its or Lattimore's views.

Note 2—Lattimore says he knew that the Chinese Communists were not simply peasant reformers, therefore never wrote anything to that effect.

Texas Republican Takes Seat in House

Texas' first Republican Congressman in 19 years, Ben H. Guill of Pampa, was sworn in yesterday as a member of the House.

The 40-year-old real estate broker fills a vacancy caused by the appointment of Eugene Worley, a Democrat, to a Federal judgeship.

Guill was presented to the House by Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts and was given the oath by Speaker Sam Rayburn, a Texas Democrat.

Air Industry Meeting Set for Williamsburg

Officials of the aviation industry and Government will hold their fifth annual meeting May 24-26 at Williamsburg, Va., the Aircraft Association announced yesterday.

All sessions will be private. Top officials of aircraft, engine, propeller and related manufacturing companies will meet with officials from the Air Force, Navy, Army, State Department, Joint Chiefs of Staff, Munitions, Research and Development and National Security Resources Boards and the civil aeronautics agencies.

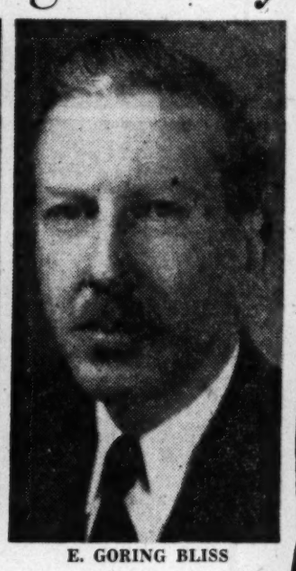
Long 'Nightmare' Is Over, Underpass a Reality

It'll Be Open, Officially, When Pigeons Fly

HORACE J. MEYERS

BRIG. GEN. G. R. YOUNG

JOHN RUSSELL YOUNG



E. GORING BLISS

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

CONNECTICUT AVENUE'S big hole in the ground—now transformed into a tile-lined motorists' dream—will be officially dedicated today at noon. A hundred homing pigeons, symbolizing the return of quiet peace from the two-year staccato of construction, will be released to various points of the city.

In the evening, the Connecticut Avenue Association, the merchants' group of the area, will sponsor a gala folk dancing festival to mark the rejuvenation of Washington's "Quality Street."

The dedication ceremony—an anticlimax since cars have been zipping through the structure for several days—will take place on the south side of the flag-ringed circle.

The Metropolitan Police Band will open the dedication program with a concert starting at 11:30 a. m. The ceremony will begin at noon with E. Goring Bliss, president of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association, as master of ceremonies.

John Russell Young, president, District Board of Commissioners, and Brig Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, will present the $4,775,000 traffic eliminator to the area and Horace J. Meyers, president, Connecticut Avenue Association, will accept it.

In the line behind a motorcyle police escort will be a 1908 Hupmobile, typical of the Connecticut ave. traffic before it grew to need an underpass.

A decorated bus with a chorus of singers sounding the glad tidings of the new day for Connecticut ave. traffic is also planned for the motorcade.

Mrs. H. C. Whitehurst, widow of the District Director of Highways; Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the President who now lives in the Avenue area; city officials, representatives of the area's citizens' and business groups and the District committees of Congress will be seated in the reviewing stand.

Another 400 long-time residents of the area, religious leaders, editors and others, will be seated in a section erected in the circle.

In the evening the merchants will take over—and so far as they are concerned, it's about time. For more than two years the retailers have watched concrete mixers replace customers' cars at their curbs.

As Alfred Pasternak, co-chairman of the Avenue Association Dedication Committee, put it:

"It'll be a pleasure to have the customers beat down the doors for a change, rather than the steam shovels."

Leo G. Hessler is the other cochairman of the committee.

The dancing festival will be the Avenue's way of saying welcome to everybody in an informal get-together manner.

Street Lights of Gold

THE south end of the circle will be blocked off from 8 to 10 p. m., and the noon-hour reviewing stand will be converted to a dance floor, with colored lights supplying the proper atmosphere.

In addition, street lights will be tinted gold, and many store windows will take up the gold motif to bathe the avenue in a color symbolic of a half century of progress.

The dancing program, with performers in native costumes, will open at 8:30 with an American Indian dance by Chief Thunderbolt Lefthand, a Capitol Hill interpreter of Indian dialects. Next will be a Kentucky running set led by Bernard Frank.

Three Irish lasses, recently arrived from Ireland, will present several Irish dances. They are members of the Douglas Hyde Society, an Irish cultural group here. Five girls from Israel will do a few Israeli dances.

Ten local dancers of Swedish extraction will present some Swedish dances, followed by a group from St. Sophia's Church Junior League in Greek traditional dances. Eugene Ysita, Pan American Union employe, will offer some Mexican dances, including one done with colorful masks.

The Bethesda Square Dance Set, led by Charles Kinser, will present several cowboy western-style dances, followed by the Washington Folk Dance Group, who will ring down the curtain with dances round the world and some American old-timers.

Sees It a Challenge To Dress Up Stores

Miss Barbara Russell, manager of Peck & Peck, 1517 Connecticut ave:

"We opened last October with a pile driver practically sitting in our laps. Business has been fine, and we expect it to continue to swell."

She, too, saw a silver lining in the underpass story. She visualizes the fight to regain business as a challenge for merchants to "dress up" their stores. "They should stop worrying about the outside and think a little more about the inside."

W. N. Moye, manager of Peoples Drug Store at 7 Dupont circle, sets down a 17 percent yearly licking during the construction period.

Once 'Worst Bottleneck'

Now You Can Round the Circle in 37 Seconds

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

WHETHER YOU travel north by northwest, west by northwest, or reverse the directions, the District Traffic Department says you will bless the Dupont Circle underpass.

George E. Kenelpp, the District's traffic director and a handy man with a stop watch, claims that it is now possible to drive through what was once Washington's worst bottleneck in 37 seconds.

That is the time it takes Massachusets avenue traffic moving from 18th st. to round the circle and reach 20th st.

It's only a matter of seconds, too, for Connecticut ave. traffic to duck under the surface at N st., and reappear at R st., avoiding the circle entirely.

The traffic department has no ready figure on how long it formerly took to travel through Dupont Circle, but there is a legend that cars once caught in the inner lane of traffic circled the area for hours before finding a way out.

Diagram of the Dupont Circle Underpass showing auto and streetcar tubes, entrances to the underground streetcar loading platforms. Arrows around the circle indicate flow of traffic. One way streets also are marked

Snarl Was Real

THERE is no legend, though, to the rush hour snarl of traffic and the gnashing of gears and teeth that was a daily occurrence for preunderpass Dupont Circle.

A 1940 study showed more than 50,000 cars daily were fed into the circle by five arterial streets. About 5000 cars moved through or more frequently backed up during rush hour.

Complicating the traffic problem were the streetcars. Northbound Mount Pleasant cars went the wrong way around, bucking southbound automobiles all the way.

The underpass aimed at eliminating this congestion is probably the city's most ambitious engineering feat.

Connecticut ave. traffic is sent underground while cars from other streets are directed by concrete strips into a controlled traffic pattern. The streetcars which formerly clanged their way around the circle also are underground.

The tube carrying automobiles burrows directly under the center of the circle passing beneath the ornate marble fountain fashioned by the sculptor Daniel Chester French. The streetcar tube snakes its way around the outer edge of the circle. Nine entrance and exit stairways lead to the underground loading platform.

"Quiet Island"

BY DIRECTING this traffic underground, the underpass planners expect Dupont Circle to become once more a quiet island of trees and grass highly populated by squirrels, pigeons, small children and mothers sunning babies in perambulators.

On the surface, Massachusetts ave. traffic follows an inner rim around the circle. Other traffic from New Hampshire ave., P st., and 19th st. is directed to an outer rim.

Provisions also have been made for the motorist who wants to make a U turn. At the Connecticut ave. intersection of the circle, the roadway ends in a semicircle permitting cars to turn around.

The pedestrian also has been taken into consideration. Islands between the lanes of traffic are five feet wide—just right for mothers caught in the traffic flow with baby carriages as the lights change.

It is possible for the Connecticut ave. stroller to miss the circle altogether. The underground streetcar loading platform may be used as a pedestrian tunnel.

Some rerouting of buses in the area has been brought about by the underpass.

Rush-hour service on Lines L-3 and L-7 will be speeded up by use of the underpass. The L-4 bus will travel on 21st st. instead of 20th between Connecticut and Massachusetts aves.

The G-2, N-2, and P-1 buses will be rerouted through the circle's surface traffic.

The Avenue Has Grown Up Gracefully

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

IN the vast network of highways that serve the Metropolitan Washington area, the place of Connecticut avenue is assured for all time.

Fittingly, this famous avenue begins at the very heart of the city—Lafayette Square, opposite the White House—and reaches well into the fast-growing suburban area. The avenue now ends in Kensington, Md., but a proposed extension has been planned to carry it almost to Brookville rd some distance farther north.

Unlike many of its counterparts in other American cities, Connecticut Avenue has made the transition from a sleepy highway in the slow-moving horse and buggy age to a major thoroughfare in the midcentury motor age. And in so doing, it has gained, rather than lost, in character.

The mark of its success today is the traffic it bears from the outer Northwest Washington and suburban Montgomery, Md., residential sections, the choicest areas in the metropolitan region.

A Primary Street

CONNECTICUT is, of course, a primary street in the area's highway pattern. And because this vast Northwest area, on both sides of the District line, has yet to have its first throughway or expressway, the avenue in effect is a willing substitute.

But even when the Northwest Freeway, with its connections to Frederick, Md., and—by an as yet undetermined route—reaches into downtown Washington, it will not affect the avenue.

In fact, highway planners believe, such a development will be all to the avenue's good. For it will relieve it of much through auto and truck use, and make it more available for area traffic, with resultant benefits both to nearby residents and the many business and shopping communities along the way.

Wide, Handsome

WASHINGTONIANS frequently forget, if, indeed, they knew, the story of how such streets and avenues as Connecticut came to be so wide and handsome. They know of course, that Pierre L'Enfant, the Frenchman who aided Washington, they know he laid the broad streets and highways to what even now seem to be adequate widths.

But for many years many of the city's streets and avenues, including Connecticut, were not paved to any such width. It was only with the coming of the motor age and the vast growth in the periods of war and depression that full use was made of L'Enfant's plan.

Because the city owned the full widths he laid out, it was able to widen streets without the tremendous expense of land condemnation which faced practically all other cities.

A Great Link

UNFORTUNATELY the adjoining Maryland areas did not do so handsomely by the avenue as did L'Enfant. But, as was the case in Chevy Chase, Md., there have been instances of excellent catching-up. Some day, no doubt, that type of dual, divided highway will be carried much further into Maryland.

And if the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission has its way the avenue itself will go even further into the hinterlands of the Metropolitan area.

For it can truly be said Connecticut avenue is one of the great links that erase the artificial political boundary of the District Line and weld together this vast metropolitan area, now among the Nation's 10 largest.

Faith Strong Despite 'Awful Beating'

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

CONNECTICUT AVENUE merchants in the immediate Dupont Circle area figure the two-year birth of the new underpass cost them anywhere from 17 to 60 percent in gross business.

All merchants you talk to underscore the licking their ledgers took. But that wasn't all.

Constantly-changing street barricades, noisy compressed air hammers, mud-shy customers, summertime dust blows and all that goes with a large highway project raised havoc with store owners' patience.

The financial strain was so heavy on some, that about 14 small businesses closed or are in receivership, thanks to Dupont's Great Upheaval, according to Horace J. Meyers, president of the Connecticut Ave. Association.

What were some of trials and housekeeping adjustments "Avenue" businessmen faced?

Resorted to Sales

TAKE Meyer's interior decorating firm at 1331 Connecticut ave., 500 feet south of the circle.

"We tried sale-at-cost bargain days, and even offered free customer parking at nearby lots," Meyer recalled.

From a housekeeping viewpoint, street dust "raised the devil" with our tapestries, he said. "Yet loss of business forced us to reduce overhead operations and trim personnel substantially."

Meyers voiced the thinking of several Dupont merchonts.

"We have never maintained the underpass would improve things for us. But there is not one who doesn't have tremendous faith in the Avenue. It will always be the fine shopping area of Washington. Quality goods at reasonable prices will always bring customers."

F. P. Fenwick, owner of the Venezia Cafeteria, 1356 Connecticut ave., was the only proprietor visited who was willing to guess at he thinks the project has cost him—$95,000 below a normal business year, or a 60 percent drop-off.

In the old days, there was a bus transfer stop in front of his cafeteria. "That was wonderful for breakfast and supper trade," Fenwick says. Now that same transfer spot is three blocks north of the circle.

Fenwick's one note of optimism is the three or four new apartment hotels up or going up within walking distance of his restaurant.

Old-Timers Recall a Different, Less Noisy Circle

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

"GOING to write the bloody place up?" one of Washington's most famous surgeons greeted us. "Hope you give it hell. Come in and have a Chesterfield."

We took measure of Dr. James F. Mitchell, the humorous eyes, the bushy black eyebrows, the white hair, the gnarled surgeon's hands.

We realized we had hit pay dirt in the search for a man to tell us about Dupont Circle. We sat down and had the Chesterfield.

His tribute to the place, though less flowery, was in some ways the warmest we came across about the old lady called Dupont Circle. And we don't mean because of that expressed hope about the lower regions. But because the privilege of an old, old friendship is the right to criticize.

Two Great Eras

DOCTOR MITCHELL is probably the greatest living touchstone to the two great eras of Dupont Circle, to two great eras of this city.

He was physician to Alexander Graham Bell, the friend and neighbor, and once operated on Marconi when he visited on Dupont Circle.

He was a poker friend of Franklin Roosevelt's.

Little is changed in his home at 1344 19th st. nw. (he also owns 17 Dupont Circle), where Doctor Mitchell settled 45 years ago. The same man, a young 78 now, looks out through the same round window in what is today one of the last private homes that survey the circle.

"If we had been sitting here then," the deep voice was saying, "we would see women in long dresses walking across the circle, men in bowler hat, children playing, a few automobiles but mostly carriages, bicycles . . . and much, much less noise."

Right now, a bumper-to-bumper phalanx of cars several across slid past a few feet from us.

'Friends of Mine'

"THESE were all homes," Doctor Mitchell laughed. "The sightseeing bus drivers used to point the circle out: 'You can't afford to live here unless you have a million.'"

He ticked them off around the Circle, ghosts of names now, but most of them nationally or internationally known . . . Scientist, newspaper publisher, financier, minister, Red Cross leader.

"All great friends of mine. All patients of mine."

The surgeon's hand rested at ease on the back of the couch.

"The first place to come in," his massive brow indicated the spot, "was a drugstore."

It must have been like the "Grape Nuts"—or whatever it was—sign first appearing on George Apley's Boston Common.

Last Residence

MRS. B. L. Hardin at 1329 Connecticut ave., just off the circle, is another who recalls the magic of the old days.

Her husband was a doctor and her son, Dr. B. L. Hardin, jr., has offices at 1329. She has lived there since about 1905, when it was all residences. Today it is the only residence in the block.

Some of the oldest-timers in Dupont Circle matters are that Connecticut ave. business triumvirate: Emile Beauvais, at 1221, hairdresser; Douglas Tschiffely, at 1224, apothecary, and Max Pasternak, 1219, women's apparel.

They are a fascinating trio of older gentlemen today and their reminiscences about the Dupont Circle area would fill a trilogy.

Tschiffely's ancestors go back to the eighteenth century in Washington. Beauvais came from France; Pasternak from Austria.

Fate made them neighbors in business and friends near Dupont Circle, starting in the early 1900s. Then all drew the upper crust of their trade from the circle area.

Economical Cal

PASTERNAK has made dresses for all the Presidents' wives except one. You can look through his files and see a bill (paid): "Mrs. Harding, cleaning and alt. suit. $7.50."

Mrs. Harding, by the way, he considers the best-dressed of the Presidents' wives.

Then:

"Whenever Mrs. Coolidge would see anything she liked, she would bring her husband by in the evening and they would window shop it. Once Mrs. Coolidge passed by and saw a large-brim hat."

The economy-minded Cal said: "See how much it will set you back."

"Those were his exact words!" chortled Mr. Pasternak. "Mrs. Coolidge told me herself."

Pasternak remembers the circle as a great courting place. He should: He did his own courting there in 1899.

"In those days you would sit on the circle and see all the famous of Washington pass by."

Spans Generations

TSCHIFFELY'S great-grandfather had a house where the circle now is "when it was a wilderness." Teddy Roosevelt and many big names were customers of Douglas Tschiffely. A kindly, brown-eyed man of 69, he is now serving grandchildren of customers he started out with.

And in his establishment, one still orders no cokes, sees no drugstore cowboys hanging around.

To Emile Beauvais, Connecticut ave. is what Fifth ave. is to New York and the Champs Elysees to Paris, and he hopes to see the analogy grow ever closer.

Coming here from France 44 years ago to pioneer the beauty profession in Washington, Monsieur Beauvais has attended to the needs in this category of more wives of Senators, ambassadors and the like than we would care to count. Magnitude of his work is indicated by the fact that 30 of his proteges have left to start on their own.

He has dispensed by the thousand permanents, finger waves, reducing and Turkish and bubble baths, corn-cuttings and wigs.

Lincoln Foliage

THOUGH this has nothing to do with women, Monsieur Emile has also dealt with an occasional beard. Robert Todd Lincoln, being unable to find a barber who knew properly how to trim his beard, used to drop in to get it done at Emile's.

But the most magnificent beard Emile ever saw was outside his shop, that of Charles Evans Hughes, whom he can remember many a time strolling down Connecticut ave.

"Magnifique!" exclaimed Emile of Hughes' beard. "I never saw a better looking man. With his cane and his beautiful beard . . ."

Then you can drop in to Randall H. Hagner & Co., the real estate firm, at 1321 Connecticut ave., which had so much to do with the development of the avenue, and talk with Thomas F. Witherspoon.

Witherspoon is a true Dupont Circlean, having spent 30 of his 70 years with Hagner's on one side of the circle and living on the other side at the Anchorage.

Breakneck Age

"FORTY years ago," he says, "this was the loveliest place in the world. People didn't worry about breaking their neck . . ."

Today fresh generations surge across Dupont Circle or will again, now that it's open. The area has been taken over mostly by Government girls.

They do, perhaps, live in a time when people are bent on breaking their necks. Anyhow, between times of such activity, new generations will soon pause again to sit in Dupont Circle and watch the world go by.

151,336 Cubic Yards of It

A Heap of Dirt Connected With Underpass Project

By Richard Lyons
Post Reporter

A FEW YEARS ago the District was thinking of a Dupont Circle underpass that would simply go under the Circle and cost a few hundred thousand dollars.

One way and another it grew in cost to about $4,775,000 and in size to three tunnels that stretch 2520 feet along Connecticut ave.

A few statistics give an idea of the size of the critter:

Measured from one end of the street car ramp to the other, the Dupont Circle project is longer than the sum total of the other three downtown underpasses—Scott and Thomas Circles and Virginia ave. at 23d st. nw. Its cost was nearly five times the total prewar cost of the other three.

The 25,000 yards of concrete used in the structure alone would pave a two-lane highway 8 miles long. Concrete in depressed and surface highways at the Circle would add another 2 miles.

The Dupont project consumed about 880,000 man-hours of work. One man working a five-day week could have built it alone in 480 years. Planning alone required 15,168 man-hours.

If it were piled in one place, the 151,336 cubic yards of earth excavated at Dupont Circle would form a hill as large as the District building—or as big as a 40-story building 100 feet square.

THAT dirt gained a certain notoriety when it was used for fill at the new Highway Bridge and pushed the northern approach piles 18 inches deeper into the ground than they should have been.

Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young told Congress the bridge sinking cost the District $100,000. On the other hand, the free fill saved the District $200,000, Highway Director J. N. Robertson said yesterday.

Tile on underground walls would pave a one-foot wide walk 8½ miles long. Ashlar stone used as facing on ramp walls would extend nearly as far. The structure contains 2850 tons of steel.

The construction contract of nearly $4,000,000 let to John McShain, Inc., was the biggest ever awarded by the District Highway Department. The South Capitol st. and new Highway bridges cost more, but the work was spread among two or more contractors. Expenses at Dupont besides McShain's contract included street paving and installation of utility connections.

Besides all that, the Dupont project undoubtedly set a new record in traffic dislocation. In addition to closing the 10-point intersection at Dupont Circle for two years, it also placed a half-mile block in the way of east-west traffic.

Howard Professor Gets Stanford Job

Dr. David Blackwell, professor and head of the department of mathematics at Howard University, has been appointed to the staff of Stanford University.

Dr. Blackwell will go to Stanford during the summer to work on an Office of Naval Research project and will assume his teaching and research duties on September 1, with the rank of visiting professor of statistics.

The mathematics professor, only 30 years of age, graduated from the University of Illinois in 1938, received his Master's degree there a year later, and his Ph.D. in 1941. He was a Rosenwald Fellow at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, N. J., then a mathematics instructor at Southern University, Baton Rouge, La., and at Clark College.

Geneva Plans Dormitory

Geneva College, Beaver Falls, Pa., will start a campaign soon for a men's dormitory, the second major building in its program for expansion of campus facilities. The first unit, a $150,000 science hall addition, was completed last fall.

Avenue Again Inviting to Shoppers

By Peggy Preston
Post Reporter

STANDING on the brow of a slight hill where Connecticut ave. meets California st., it is possible to get a birdseye view of one of the most beautiful and unique shopping areas in America.

It is known, commercially, as the Connecticut ave. shopping zone, and today its face is particularly bright. For its main artery just won a two-year battle of the steam shovels and derricks, the Dupont Circle underpass is opened, the broad pavement of the boulevard cleared for traffic once more.

Shoppers again have free access to the shops and business establishments that rim historic Connecticut ave., within the north-south boundaries of the zone. Merchants believe the area to be on the eve of the greatest period of growth and prosperity in history.

Faith in its future has been evidenced a dozen times in the past two years. During the construction of the underpass, when the area's fortunes were at their lowest ebb, new buildings and shops were going up on the few available lots. Branches of important F st. stores were established on the avenue, and several New York concerns opened shops there.

Horace J. Meyers, president of the Connecticut Avenue Association, places the boundaries of the zone in this manner: On the north, at Florida ave.; on the south, at Lafayette Park, and one block on either side of the avenue, east and west.

Once inside its confines, the discriminating shopper may find the answer to his every need. In fact, one may live a lifetime within the zone without ever venturing forth in search of lodging, food, clothing, household equipment or medical aid.

Strolling south along Connecticut from the Temple Heights intersection, the visitor to the area will be constantly surprised and delighted.

A couple from New York or a bustling Midwestern city, for instance, will be charmed with the beauty of the tree-lined boulevard. They will pause to admire the great sweep of the circle, with its majestic fountain in the center, and they will purchase fresh flowers from a street vendor at the corner.

Famous Mansions

LOOKING down the broad avenues of Massachusetts and New Hampshire which span out from the circle, they will see many of the magnificent mansions built by famous families of the Capital at the turn of the century. They will observe the marble and stone palaces that house, or have housed, the diplomatic staffs of foreign countries.

On Connecticut itself, they will find a mixture of new and old architecture, the skyline reflecting each decade in the avenue's 50-year period of growth.

With the resumption of traffic on Connecticut ave., shoppers are again window gazing, as of old. Here, from Fredericksburg, Va. for a day of shopping, are Barbara Dorn (left) and Cynthia DeWitt

For shopping purposes they will compare the street with New York's Madison ave. The same intimate type of shops characterize both thoroughfares, and the variety of merchandize is much the same.

Window shopping along the avenue, the strollers will note dozens of small, select hat shops, and more shoe stores than are on F st. Scores of dress shops are interspersed with those devoted to blouses, lingerie, furs, perfume, handbags and gloves, and every conceivable item of women's apparel.

Tucked away among them are several devoted to the forgotten male shopper. He may find those that will take care of all his wardrobe needs and others that will interest him such as luggage and leather shops, and those specializing in jewelry and watches, automobiles and in the sale of plane and railway tickets.

Food Mecca

WASHINGTON'S oldest and best known wine and food merchants have shops on the avenue, and for restaurants it is unsurpassed by any other street in the city. For lunch the strollers may stop at the new Dupont Plaza Hotel, where a New York firm has just opened a branch restaurant. Or they may continue down the blocks, finding eating establishments that cater to every taste.

For tea dancing there is the Lounge of the Mayflower and, if a night club is in order, the Statler affords one just a block over on K st. Motion-picture fans can enjoy the films at the Dupont Theater.

Drug stores abound in the area, including one of Washington's oldest and rarest—a true apothecary shop.

Some of the city's finest silver and antique shops are there, and one may also find exclusive furniture and upholstery stores, as well as those specializing in linen, glassware, rugs, garden furnishings, and works of art.

Small Fry Catered to

CHILDREN are not neglected, either. Toy stores and those carrying small-fry clothing are on several blocks.

In case of an accident or sudden illness, the Connecticut ave. strollers would not have far to go for medical aid. Physicians' offices are to be found in every block and several buildings in the area are devoted entirely to medical men. Lawyers, real estate brokers, local and national industrial concerns have all converged on the area within recent years.

Financial affairs may be carried on in the avenue branches of three of the city's biggest banks.

If it is Sunday morning, the strollers may have a choice of churches to visit. There is St. Matthew's Cathedral, more than 50 years old, which stands just off the avenue on Rhode Island. At the corner of N st. is another historic place of worship, the National Presbyterian Church.

Privately owned residences still exist in the area. Apartment houses, guest homes, hotels both big and small flourish there. Those who stroll there frequently will come to note many familiar faces. For many thousands of persons make their homes, as well as their living in the very heart of this little city within a city.

District Doesn't Give 'a Damnum Absque Injuria'

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

STRIVING to regain their former business position on the avenue of fine shops, the merchants around Dupont Circle are too busy to talk long about "inequity of opportunity."

They are more apt to be thinking about improving the display in the window, or renewing acquaintance with an old customer who once again has parked her automobile nearby and comes into the shop to see the wares on the shelves.

The merchants may remember a Latin phrase, "damnum absque injuria," which their lawyers quote. It means that although there might be injury, the injured person could not maintain suit for damages because no legal right was violated.

Because of that doctrine, the merchants were told that it was doubtful whether in a court suit they could ever recover a penny of the hundreds of thousands of dollars they lost in business during the two-year underpass construction job.

The merchants sought legal advice early and were told that recovery was improbable.

At the District Building, the Corporation Counsel's office had ready to cite a number of cases holding that Washington authorities have the right to regrade its streets; that it wasn't violating anybody's rights in doing it; that the builders need only be careful and not delay unnecessarily.

And so, the result was "damnum absque injuria" so far as the courts were concerned, they said.

Lawsuit Idea Dropped

SOON, the merchants seek to have Congress pass a bill based on that other phrase, "inequity of opportunity." It would reimburse the merchants for actual proved losses—if it passes.

Horace J. Meyers, president of the Connecticut Avenue Association, says:

"We abandoned the possibility of lawsuit on the advice of our attorneys, who said it would be difficult if not impossible to prove that the District was negligent. We decided that it was not the proper way to handle the inequity of opportunity.

"But our position was made extremely difficult because of the long duration of the construction, which was for the city-wide benefit. We feel that we should recoup some of our losses somehow.

"In the near future, we hope to have our bill introduced. Many of our businessmen are joining in on the bill. The ball is rolling, although for a time it seemed that the merchants were too busy with other things. Now, they don't want to miss the boat."

Meyers said the loss in business volume had been "tremendous." Reports have varied from 20 to 60 percent, and the latter is conservative, Meyers said.

But at the District Building, the law officials are looking back on the construction with satisfaction.

The reason is that only one District Court lawsuit for personal injury was brought because of the job and less than a dozen claims were filed.

The one major suit, filed by Mrs. Mabel H. Rutter, of 2122 California st. nw., is still pending. Mrs. Rutter, who fell over a sidewalk depression in the 1600 block of Connecticut ave., asks $50,000 damages. She claims, through Attorney Alvin L. Newmyer, that she suffered a fracture of the clavicle and back injuries and charges the District was negligent.

The claims were all for relatively small sums, the Corporation Counsel's office said. They included a claim where a pile driver broke through a service pipe. Another citizen complained he was splashed with dirt. Another said his clothes were torn. One man claimed damage to the base of his building and cracks in plaster.

All the claims were turned over to an insurance company. The insurance was taken out when it appeared for a time that much blasting would be necessary.

The city took other precautions also.

Barricades were set up at all points where there was danger. Cracks in streets were repaired regularly. Workmen were cautioned time and time again to use the utmost care.

DUPONT CIRCLE UNDERPASS

Ambitious Program

Thomas Circle First Of Street Projects

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

REMEMBER the good old days before they tore up Thomas Circle to build the Massachusetts Avenue underpass?

What a bottleneck that was—raved at by thousands of District motorists.

Thomas Circle was the first step in an ambitious program to underpass the three most-oft-rounded traffic circles in Washington: Thomas, Scott and Dupont.

Now that that program is complete, District taxpayers can draw a deep breath of relief: all they have to worry about is umpteen more traffic bottlenecks which either have been around as long as the Circles bottlenecks or which, like Topsy and the motor vehicle registration, have just "growed."

Some of the same District motorists who cursed the Thomas, Scott and Dupont Circle bottlenecks have now moved way out in the suburbs, and have created other vehicular bottlenecks to rave about.

Something to Point At

DISTRICT highway planners, stuck with bottlenecks, long range expressway planning and local highway rehabilitation, can point to a good half dozen very congested hot spots in Washington about which something must be done in the near future.

District highway planning head Douglas Brinkley said: "The people pay for these improvements whether they have them or not. If they don't have them, they pay in lost time, accidents, gasoline consumption, etc. If they do have them, they pay taxes, but they don't pay these other unseen costs."

When the bottlenecks are going to be eased must be answered by Congress, in the last analysis. Highway officials estimate that they could start two big projects per year without placing too much burden either on construction designers or construction forces. Allowing two years per project, the biggest bottlenecks could be broken within six or eight years—if the money is forthcoming, Brinkley estimates.

District highway officials think one of the city's worst points for traffic congestion is 15th and H sts. ne., where six roads intersect, one of them an alternate Washington-Baltimore highway.

Millions Needed

THIS bottleneck has been freely discussed by planners and engineers alike, who agree pretty generally that a three-grade separation and several million dollars will be needed to break up the jam.

Two main plans for it have been advanced. Having an edge now is a plan to overpass Maryland avenue—which may be extended to connect with a bridge over the Washington-Baltimore Parkway; underpass Benning rd. to Florida ave. and have all other traffic use the surface.

A bad bottleneck in the same area is the Benning rd.-Minnesota ave. intersection, where there is a heavy turning movement. These roads feed Central ave. and all nearby beaches.

The plan is to make a grade separation of the two main arteries. But highway planners, now working for approval of an East Capitol Street span, hope to postpone work on the Benning situation until the new bridge can take the bulk of the traffic load away from Benning—at least temporarily. If grade separation were undertaken now, highway officials explain, traffic using the two roadways would have no place to go.

For Barney Circle, on the west approach to the Sousa bridge, there is a plethora of plans for remedying a particularly onerous traffic situation which pesters and delays Southeast Washingtonians, as well as those Marylanders who use the Marlboro Pike and Pennsylvania Avenue to enter the city.

It Will Cost Money

HIGHWAY officials don't have a "fix" on Barney yet—but they know any solution will be expensive. Problem is to accommodate street car, bus, truck and automobile traffic which gorges the bridge approach during rush hours. One proposal has been to put both the street car and bus terminals underground, leaving the surface for free-wheelers.

A second proposal would be to make a grade separation on 17th st., which runs north and south at the Circle.

Another overcrowded-as-to-moving-vehicles place in the city is Eckington Yards, where New York ave., Florida ave. and Eckington pl. intersect. Here is planned a grade separation, which would grade New York ave. upward in an overpass to join with the existing railroad bridge over the Pennsylvania tracks.

These are but a few of the more immediate projects which engineers and planners are worried about. Building up as another hot spot is Logan Circle, which gets a lot of in and outbound traffic from both Silver Spring and Takoma Park, Md., and the areas in between. The Circle has been relighted, but eventually, officials fear, more expensive and drastic remedies must be undertaken.

Freeway Put Off

THE Whitehurst Freeway, highway officials think, has put off—for about five years—the immediate necessity to do something about the Washington Circle situation. In the long-range plan, however, the circle will be underpassed to connect with K st., which would be depressed as a Mid-City Freeway.

One so-called bottleneck, described at a recent session of the National Capital Parks and Planning Commission, is considered a minor item to engineers. That is the 11th st. bridge over the Anacostia River. Highway officials believe that with "minor" improvements, such as widening the approaches at the north end of the bridge, the traffic flow can be appreciably speeded.

And, of course, in addition to these bottlenecks, highway officials say, there are others still minor in nature; there is planning to avoid future bottlenecks; also there is maintenance of existing highways.

Citizens to Have Last Guess on Engineers'

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Now that they've taken the Circle out of Dupont Circle, Washingtonians have their long chance to second guess District engineers.

Was it a mistake to tunnelize Connecticut ave.?

That has been a question no one could positively answer since construction on the project—involving nearly four million dollars—was begun in March, 1948. It became a secondary question, at least temporarily, as soon as construction workers began digging the big Dupont Circle ditches, and Greater Washington motorists sweated out getting used to a "squared" Dupont Circle, which meant blocks-long detours around the project.

Then, the big question was, "When, if ever, will they finish the darn thing?"

There were various estimated answers: Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young predicted in 1945 that the tunnel might be a reality in the spring of 1948 and in 1947 said "about two years."

The late Highway Director H. C. Whitehurst hit it about right when, in September, 1947, he estimated between 18 months and two years to complete the underpass, once construction was under way.

Now that the mud of construction has been cleared away, motorists and pedestrians alike can make up their minds whether it is better to have suffered the swings and narrows of outranging detours for the finished product.

One person who made up his mind a long time ago about the worth of the finished product was Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, former chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Called Too Costly

General Grant has contended that the $3,800,000-odd cost of Dupont Circle as now constituted is just about three million dollars too much. He believes that much could have been saved if Massachusetts ave. had been tunnelized instead of Connecticut. Saving would have been in need for only one vehicular tunnel, leaving streetcar tracks and Connecticut ave. traffic on the surface.

General Grant first aired his objections to the project in an address before the Fort Wayne Civic Association in May, 1947. He said the Connecticut ave. tunnel was adopted "without full investigation."

Later, he argued that Connecticut ave. traffic has just about reached its saturation point; that Massachusetts ave. is by no means built up, will steadily increase in traffic volume going through Dupont Circle.

General Grant has never made his objections on an official basis, however, and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission approved the project.

Another protestant against the Dupont Circle plan was the Citizens Council for Community Planning, which asked reconsideration of project plans both because of the high cost of the work and the fact that traffic improvements elsewhere might alter traffic patterns.

Commissioner Guy Mason told this group that "if we adopted the principle of waiting" until further growth before acting, "we would then find ourselves faced with another series of problematical future contingencies."

Engineers Justify It

District engineers have justified the Connecticut ave. tunneling principally on the basis of the traffic it does put underground. Running counter to General Grant's argument, they declare that putting the streetcars underground will naturally change the saturation point of the circle.

Origin and destination surveys taken in 1945 showed about 56.5 percent of the Massachusetts ave. traffic was through traffic, and about 65 percent of Connecticut ave. traffic was through traffic.

Since 1945, highway officials estimate there has been about a 12 percent increase in Dupont Circle area traffic. As soon as the new circle arrangement has been in effect for about a month, highway engineers will take another sampling of where the Dupont Circle traffic wants to go.

In 1941, they found that 50,000 cars used all Dupont Circle streets during a 24-hour period, with a peak hour flow of about 4000 cars. By 1955, they expect 62,000 cars will be using Dupont Circle streets daily, with a peak hour flow of 5300 cars.

District engineers think tunneling Connecticut ave. will speed up streetcar travel time, reduce pedestrian crossings at the circle, provide a separate roadway for through-Massachusetts ave. traffic, separate traffic three ways.

Underpass Will Pay for Itself, Highway Dept. Says

LIKE THE washing machine salesman, the District Highway Department says its latest product—Dupont Circle Underpass—will pay for itself.

This is putting it conservatively. Actually, the Department, buttressed by a flock of figures and exhibits, feels the $4,775,000 project will pay for itself in 25 years in motorists' savings and bring additional benefits to drivers and businessmen for miles around.

Here is how the "pay for itself" view is justified:

About 53,000 cars a day are expected to pass through the circle, of which an estimated 80 percent—42,400—will save 1¼ minutes each. These are the vehicles zooming through the Connecticut ave. underpass and others using Massachusetts ave. who profit from the speedup on the surface.

The Bureau of Public Roads has recommended a value of 1¼ cents for such time saving, basing this on the value of the saving in gasoline and reduction in chances of accident and property damage.

This amounts to $636 a day. On the basis of 300 driving days a year—work and pleasure—this total mounts to $190,800, so that in 25 years, the project cost would almost be matched.

Conservative Estimate

THIS economic estimate, Highway Director J. N. Robinson points out, is conservative since it does not consider the savings in time for the driver and his passengers, which is worth considerable in the aggregate, or the savings in time for the Capital Transit Co. streetcar lines and their passengers, plus other benefits.

Capital Transit operates 560 runs each way through the tunnel, carrying an average of 16,600 daily. So far no time has been saved, because of construction work delays, but about a minute saving time on each run is expected. Although this amounts to about $30 a day in operators' pay, it will take a long time to liquidate the $600,000 which the firm spent in changing its trackage, company officials warn.

In addition, the project is expected by the District Highway Dept., to relieve the shopping area of non-profitable through traffic, leaving the surface roadways for shoppers, a welcome sign for the long-suffering merchants of the area.

The traditional congestion on 18th and 20th streets resulting from bypassing of the circle even before the construction began, will be thinned out through what the traffic engineers call "induced traffic" leading such cars right into the underpass. This is only one example of the indirect results of the construction, Robertson declared.

Benefit to Suburbs

BUT the project has direct effect on the outlying areas of Washington and adjoining sections of Maryland. Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire and similar diagonals are the "lifeline of Washington" and will hasten commuters going to and fro.

Residents of these areas probably would readily agree with this 1946 Highway Department description:

"The existing intersection facility at Dupont Circle has, in the past few years, offered daily proof of its functional inability to carry peak hour flows.

"Steadily mounting volumes of traffic on the major radial roads involved have caused a chronic morning and evening condition of over-saturation and, in all instances where important through movements are in need of rapid and unobstructed accommodation, brought about a complete breakdown of motor travel in the rotary."

In 1941, the department recorded 49,970 cars entering the circle from various points. Four years later, the comprehensive Origin and Destination study showed a decline to 35,000, but this was a period of wartime controls on gasoline, tires and cars. In '47, a limited check showed a surge back to the '41 figures.

Commuters' Boon

THE breakfast-gulping commuters who leave at the last possible minute are expected to flock to the underpass.

The Highway Department anticipates that Montgomery County motorists living east of Wisconsin ave. and west of Rock Creek Park will use the tunnel. This includes Garrett Park, Kensington, Rollingwood, North Chevy Chase, Rock Creek Hills, the Bradley la. section of Chevy Chase, Friendship Heights and the east end of Bethesda, all in Maryland. On the District side, drivers from Chevy Chase, Cleveland Park, Columbia Heights and Tenleytown are awaited.

The circle time saving is expected to tap incoming drivers from Glen Echo, Md., American University Park, Wesley Heights, Tenleytown and Friendship Heights along Massachusetts ave.

Many now using Wisconsin ave. are expected to transfer to Connecticut if they are headed to the heart of downtown. Also motorists bound on various cross-town runs, who have been avoiding the circle like the plague, will probably start using it again.

New Hampshire Drain

NEW HAMPSHIRE AVE. extended residents will profit little from the new circle, since the avenue does not run straight through. It has a break between 15th and Florida and Sherman ave. and Park rd.

The circle will, however, drain off much 16th st. traffic, particularly that headed for the Federal buildings along upper Constitution ave., and thus will speed the way for New Hampshire ave. entrants. They usually ride via Sherman ave., 16th st. and Vermont ave. into the downtown area. Any traffic weaned away will help them.

The Highway Department, which considers the circle "as a hub and interchange, which connects with business and governmental districts and residential areas in the Northwest," expects the underpass to "induce approximately 20 percent more vehicles to use the intersection than do so at present."

By 1960, "80,000 vehicles will be drawn into this redesigned facility by the ease, safety and comfort with which it can be negotiated," the department predicts.

Connecticut Ave. Begins Big Job of Resuscitation

By S. L. Fishbein
Post Reporter

IT MAY BE news to some people, but the Connecticut Avenue Association has other things on its mind besides the Dupont Circle underpass.

In the past few years, of course, the association has struggled mightily, first to keep the underpass away, and finally, to get it over with quickly.

And in the future, the association will devote its major efforts to resuscitating its beleaguered members after what its president, Horace J. Meyers, calls "two years of suffering."

But the fight that has kept the association in the public eye in recent years is only one activity in a continuing program to keep Connecticut Avenue a thriving thoroughfare.

Beauvais Letter

IT WAS far from thriving in 1933. Then, recalls Alfred Pasternak of M. Pasternak, 1219 Connecticut ave., the street was blotched with vacant windows. A disease called depression.

There were also some cut-throat goings-on on the toney avenue. "Off-color sales," Pasternak calls them.

It was at that point that Emile Beauvais, sr., whom Pasternak describes as "a forthright citizen," wrote the famous letter that spawned the Connecticut Avenue Association and still hangs framed in President Meyers' office.

In reply, Pasternak, Charles Camalier of Camalier and Buckley; Guy Baden of the Hamilton National Bank branch; Lew Binns of The Bootery and about a dozen others met with the head of Emile's, a beauty salon at 1221 Connecticut ave.

The new-born babe quickly got together with the Better Business Bureau, and Connecticut ave. was soon Connecticut ave. again.

Began to Score

ABOUT 1937, Pasternak recalls, the association began to score in a big way. Association-sponsored fashion shows were packing them in at the Mayflower Hotel. Cooperative advertising pages were putting the avenue prominently on the map.

At the same time, the association started the sociable practice of dinner meetings and these, Pasternak says, "engendered a great deal of enthusiasm."

Today, with about 150, the association has more members than it has had in a long time, President Meyers says. Fifteen new ones were inducted at the last meeting, the largest block ever to join at one time.

And the membership drive will continue. Any businessman or property owner within two blocks either side of the avenue between Florida and Pennsylvania aves. is eligible.

What are its future plans? "The Association will foster any movement that will tend to rejuvenate activity on the avenue," says Meyers, the former chairman of the underpass committee, who set up his home furnishings store on the avenue four years ago.

This year's Easter Parade was one such activity. The underpass opening celebration is another. There'll be more.

Circle Fountain Honors Admiral Dupont

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Workmen complete the walk around Memorial Fountain in Dupont Circle

DEAD 85 years this June 23, Rear Admiral Francis Samuel Dupont can rest easy—the fountain that keeps green his memory is back in place at Dupont Circle.

It used to be Pacific Circle, and it used to be a statue, but for 65 years the naval hero's memory has been perpetuated at the intersection of Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Hampshire aves., P and 19th sts. nw.

Formal opening of the Dupont Circle underpass is but the latest incident in the history of a neighborhood which once included a slaughterhouse of which the waste was drained away by old Slash Run and its branches.

Blackberry bushes were probably flourishing there even in 1815 when the future admiral, then 12-years-old, was appointed a Navy midshipman from Delaware.

He was the son of Victor Marie DuPont, who had left the French diplomatic service and settled down in Rhode Island in 1800 to become a founder of the business house of DuPont de Nemours, and the grandson of Pierre Samuel DePont de Nemours, educator and statesman.

Triumphed in California

THE SAILOR had already had an active career when in 1845 he was ordered to the Pacific again, arriving in California as the Mexican War started.

In command of the Cyane, he captured San Diego, took possession of LaPaz, capital of Lower California, spiked the guns of San Blas, entered the harbor of Guayamas, burned two gunboats and cut out a Mexican brig under heavy fire, and left the Gulf of California clear of hostile ships.

Under command of Commodore Shubrick, he participated in the capture of Mazatlan and three months later landed at San Jose with a naval force and engaged a large force of Mexicans. Later he led or sent out various expeditions into the interior.

His career in the Civil War was distinguished on a greater scale. In June, 1861, he was president of a board convened in Washington to form a general plan of naval operations against the South. In October, as a flag officer, he led an expedition from Norfolk that successfully attacked the fortifications defending Fort Royal harbor. His command, said to have been the largest ever led by an American naval officer up to that time, launched the blockade of Southern ports. For his services he received the thanks of Congress and was appointed rear admiral.

Toward the close of 1862 several armored vessels of the Monitor type were added to his command, and on April 7, 1863, he made a resolute attempt to take Charleston.

In July, 1863, he was relieved of his command, and on June 23, 1865, he died in Philadelphia. In addition to his wartime achievements, he had served on the board that organized the Naval Academy, and wrote various professional papers.

Name Changed in 1884

THREE dimensional recognition of Admiral DuPont's achievements came with the dedication December 20, 1884, of a $20,500 statute provided by Congress. It was also at this time that the name of the circle was changed from "Pacific" to "Dupont."

President Arthur, Admiral Porter, General Sheridan, Dupont Post of the Grand Army of the Republic, from Wilmington, Del., Launt Thompson, the sculptor, were among those in the stand set up on the south side of the circle, facing Connecticut ave., for the dedication.

Also present were the Marine Band, a detachment of sailors from the USS Dispatch, and the light battery of the 2d U. S. Artillery, stationed at the Arsenal.

It was a cold and windy day, and the Potomac was frozen from Washington to Alexandria. Perhaps it was because of the cold that the bare-headed orator of the day, Senator Thomas F. Bayard, jr., of Delaware, talked only 70 minutes.

He described the statue as "a figure of bronze of heroic proportions, moulded in an attitude natural to the man whom it admirably represents. . . . The admiral is here represented as standing on the quarterdeck, marine glass in hand, which he has just lowered after an inspection of a distant object, leaving his countenance lit with an expression of alert interest."

The dedication concluded with a rear admiral's salute of 13 guns from the battery, stationed on P st.

The Dupont Circle area was already beginning to become a socially prominent neighborhood when the statue was erected. Ten years before Senator William M. Stewart of Nevada had built the first important residence there—on the site now occupied by a branch of the Riggs National Bank. At the time it was known as "Stewart's Folly" because of its seeming remoteness, and sometimes as "Stewart's Castle." It was occupied by the Chinese Embassy for a time before it was demolished in 1901.

Blaine Lived Nearby

TIME and fashion soon caught up with the Nevada Senator, however, and James G. Blaine, a presidential candidate defeated by Cleveland, lived just off the circle for a time, his house a center of social activity.

In 1902 residents of the neighborhood watched the erection of 15 Dupont Circle, designed by Stanford White for Mrs. Robert Wilson Patterson, mother of the late publisher of the Times-Herald. Another well-known architect, John Russell Pope, was called in 1909 to design the home of Mrs. Robert R. Hitt, widow of an Illinois Congressman, at 1501 New Hampshire ave.

Dupont Circle was also the site of a temporary White House when President Coolidge occupied the Patterson residence while the Presidential mansion was undergoing repair. It was during this period that the "Lone Eagle," Col. Charles Lindbergh, following his return from his famous flight, stood on the balcony one day and waved to the throng.

Though the neighborhood is no longer "the" focal point of society, it still retains much of the old atmosphere — even as the neighborhood's Connecticut ave. is resembling more and more New York's upper Fifth Avenue. Contributing to the atmosphere are the Junior League, at 2001 Massachusetts ave., and the Sulgrave Club at 1801 Massachusetts ave.

Nearby, at 1711 Massachusetts ave., was Fairmont School, one of the city's famous finishing schools. The address had formerly been that of Henry A. Dupont, a Delaware Senator from 1906 to 1917, and a Civil War veteran who received a medal of honor for gallantry at Fishers Hill, Va.

Presumably the statue of Admiral Dupont would still be standing in the center of Dupont Circle had it not been that a member of the DuPont family developed an esthetic aversion to it.

In its place was dedicated May 17, 1921, the present large Italian marble fountain, erected at the Dupont family's expense. Henry Bacon, architect, and Daniel Chester French, sculptor—the same team that worked on the Lincoln Memorial— were responsible for the $100,000 fountain, in which three maidens weighing 12 tons stand on an 8-ton base and support a 15-ton bowl. The maidens symbolize Sea, Stars and Wind—a sailor's trinity.

Present for the dedication were Mrs. Harding; Mrs. Bruce Ford, granddaughter of the admiral and the one who pulled the strings unveiling the fountain; Secretary of War and Mrs. Weeks; Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Denby, and many other distinguished persons. Rear Admiral P. F. Harrington, ret., who had served with Dupont, presided.

Three little great-grandnieces of Admiral Dupont cast wreaths of green laurel into the fountain waters. They were Emily DuPont, Mary Harvey and Ann Andrews.

Secretary Weeks, who had charge of Washington's public parks, said "the proposal to bring manufacturing interests here would be in opposition to the general welfare of the community," and Secretary Denby in the concluding address reviewed the admiral's career.

Now, after 25 months during construction of the underpass, the fountain is back in place.

Mary Baldwin Lists Philosophy Course

Staunton, Va.—An interdepartmental course entitled Philosophy and the Arts will be offered at Mary Baldwin College next year. With five instructors collaborating, the course seeks to lead to a more adequate understanding and appreciation of the human values in our cultural heritage by examining the underlying philosophies of life which find expression in the fields of music, literature, the theater, painting, sculpture, ethics, and religion.

President Frank Bell Lewis will teach a course in logic as an additional course in the department of philosophy. Before coming to Mary Baldwin in 1947 he was professor of Bible and philosophy at Davis and Elkins College.

McShain's a Push-Over for Steam Shovels

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

JOHN McSHAIN
. . . reads the fine print

WHEN amateur sidewalk superintendents (who like to watch steam shovels) gaze at a building project in Washington these days, they're likely to have to gaze through, or around, a sign that proclaims: John McShain, Inc., Builders.

For the principal builder of the Dupont Circle underpass—a Philadelphia man—is also the principal builder in the District, and has been for some years back.

John McShain, the man back of much of Washington's beehive of public activity, and some sizable private projects as well, has that sidewalk superintendent feeling himself—with a vengeance.

"Some of the happiest moments of my life," he said some time ago, "have been spent watching steam shovels."

The only difference between McShain and the amateur steam shovel watchers is that the ones he gazes at represent about 85 million dollars' worth of his current contracts. More than 50 million of this sum is in Washington projects.

Other Irons in Fire

THE SLIM, 5-foot-7 master builder, who at 51 is a dynamo of construction energy, is building, beside the underpass, the $21,600,000 new General Accounting Office; the $16,800,000 superstructure of the clinical research center of the National Institutes of Public Health at Bethesda; the famed White House reconstruction; several "small" jobs such as the $237,000 Mellon Memorial Fountain facing the National Gallery of Art, and a few private jobs such as the new $2,750,000 Washington Post building and the $1,600,000 Kiplinger Letters building.

With all this going on here, McShain prefers to live in Philadelphia, leaving his general superintendent, P. J. Hauck, in charge and shuttling among the Washington jobs most of the time.

"I come to Washington about once a week," said McShain recently, "and I'm always too busy to do anything besides work. I've been a member of the Columbia Country Club for several years now, and I've never yet played golf there."

Pentagon Contractor

BEHIND him are such major Washington projects as the Pentagon of which he was principal prime contractor — and which gave his firm the first Army-Navy wartime production award for construction efficiency in the area.

There were also the new State Department building, the National Airport terminal, the Naval Hospital in Bethesda, and the Jefferson Memorial.

'Prestige' Jobs

THE distinguished-looking builder, whose youthful face, set off by greying temples and a clipped, silvery mustache, gives him a wealthy sportsman look, glows when he talks about the Jefferson Memorial and the White House work.

"When the Jefferson Memorial job came along I thought that was a once-in-a-lifetime deal," he told a reporter, "but the White House—look: we'll be lucky if we come out even on it, and from a business standpoint I'd make a deal with you right now for it—but I wouldn't give up that job for any money you could name."

McShain has summed up his feelings about building or rebuilding such monuments as these and the Roosevelt Library in Hyde Park with the pronouncement:

"I'd rather break even on a monumental building than make a million on an uninspired warehouse."

Up From a Garage

IT WAS in a small, dingy office over an uninspired garage that the man who was to have 150 million dollars worth of wartime contracts began his life work in his early 20's.

He had entered Georgetown University with the intention of becoming a lawyer, but his builder father died and he left college after his freshman year.

He studied basic theory for six months at Drexel Institute of Technology and then worked for three years with his employes, learning to be a carpenter, "for that's what a builder really is," he had decided.

And above all, he read contracts—particularly the fine print in the contracts he didn't win.

Those who have tried to figure out McShain's success in the highly competitive building game say he and his lieutenants have made a fine art of estimating.

Furthermore, they say, he can figure just as closely on his subcontracting prices. Subcontracting firms know that on many a job, they'll work for the McShain firm at closely-figured—but fair—rates, or not work at all.

Builders also point to his preference for those jobs which will bring him national prestige. When he bids on these, they say, the profit motive is secondary and his bids are correspondingly lower.

McShain owns a traction company and hotel in Atlantic City and in 1946 purchased the Barclay Hotel in Philadelphia, where he lives in an apartment with his wife and father-in-law.

To those who think he's done an unusually large amount of building for the Democrats, he replies firmly that they've saved money on it. Furthermore, he says, "I'm strictly a Republican, and I haven't even given a Republican a nickel, much less a Democrat."

His policy seems to pay off. After all, he was the No. 1 builder of the largest office building in the world, and he's rebuilding perhaps the most famous residence in the world.

D. C. Girls Elected At Westhampton

Two Washington girls who were high school classmates for four years recently were named officers of the class of 1953 at Westhampton College, University of Richmond. Besides graduating together from Woodrow Wilson High School last year, both are daughters of members of the Washington press corps.

Janet K. Francis of 2808 McKinley pl., n.w., was elected president for the sophomore year at the women's division of the University of Richmond and Patti Thompson of 6002 32d st., treasurer.

Miss Francis, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren B. Francis, was head cheerleader at Woodrow Wilson during her senior year, as well as president of Omega Phi Delta Sorority. Miss Thompson, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. F. Irving Thompson, won her class numerals last fall as member of the Westhampton field hockey team.
